By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 29.

AMERICAN INVENTIVE genius was developed during the Civil War. Men had to shift for themselves, change their habits, do their own planning.

The big war, taking three million young Americans to Europe, and many thousand millions of American dollars with them, will probably be worth more than all the money foolishly and extravagantly spent, because it taught so many men to think, and made them see the world.

Says young Mr. Houston, as he fits the interlocking tile and fastens them with copper nails:

"The French put their tiles on open rafters, don't nail them on boards. They cement them underneath to prevent leaks. That's a good plan. The very best plan is to lay them on boards and cement them on instead of nailing them on.

"Where did I learn about French tile laying? In France during the war. Copper nails always last as long as the house stands."

THIS DAY devoted to watching science fight mosquitoes on some of the Florida keys that still hold back the ocean, where tiny coral-building creatures erected them thousands of centuries ago.

Mosquito fighting is good news for this country. Under the direction of the entomological branch of the Department of Agriculture, on Uncle Sam's payroll, thirty thousand men are working in twenty-two states on the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts, fighting salt marsh mosquitoes.

President Roosevelt's "CWA" supplies the money.

HERE IN Dade County, Florida, more than 1,000 men are engaged in the work. It is not done by draining pools, no use of oil to smother baby mosquitoes as they rise to the surface.

The workers dig ditches that will allow minnows, tiny fish from the ocean and gulf or bay, to get into the mosquito breeding places. The minnows do the rest.

THE SALT marsh mosquito does not lay her eggs in the water, but on low lying ground where she knows water will soon come from rain and rising tides.

Shallow trenches, leading in from the main water body, allow the minnows, only about an inch long, but full-grown fish, to enter the mosquitoes' breeding ground. Once they arrive, farewell to the next mosquito generation.

The most valuable of these minnows, a tropical fish called gambusia, voracious beyond belief, does not eat, and then rest.

He eats continuously, devouring every day eight to ten times his own weight in mosquito larvae. That is as though Carnera, the heavy prizefighter, ate two thousand six hundred pounds of beef a day.

THE DITCH digging is done by hand, and all the laborers in this Dade County work are Negroes. White men are foremen.

Ditch digging, in mango swamps, knee deep in black muck, is not a job that appeals to white men. The Negroes do it willingly, and for work which earned them twelve and one-half cents an hour a year ago. They now, under President Roosevelt's wise ruling, are paid forty cents an hour.

The foreman tells you:

"The men do more work per dollar spent, at forty cents an hour, than they did at twelve and a half cents. We get better men, they have enough to eat, and feel like working."

The men are allowed six hours' work a day, get paid for the time it takes them to reach the job, and come home "on their own time."

IT PLEASES you to know that soon, wiggling around in hundreds of miles of ditches all along the coast of the United States, there will be billions of tiny fish devouring hundreds of billions of baby mosquitoes.

This work, that with local cooperation can be made permanent, will cost altogether less than this country spent on the big useless war in one day.

Think what could be done with the eleven thousand million dollars in cash that we sent to Europe to help Europeans to cut each other's throats, to say nothing of many more billions that we spent on our part in the war.

If we could afford money to help kill people with whom we had no quarrel, we certainly can afford money to kill mosquitoes that bite us.

THE SALT marsh mosquito does not spread disease, but it is a dangerous enemy.

Where it breeds as it does here, in semi-tropical weather, the marsh mosquito has been known to darken windows, in its swarms, kill cattle and dogs, and last June, for three days, even the Negro laborers, with all protection, were unable to work in the face of the clouds of mosquitoes that attacked them.

THE PRESIDENT, because men are idle and need money to feed their children, orders those in charge of this mosquito extermination job to use hand labor, no machinery.

One man, through the thick tropical growth and heavy muck filled with interlaced roots, can dig twenty feet of ditch in a six-hour day by working hard.

NRA CHIEF OPPOSES SYSTEM

Gen. Johnson Calls For Suspension of Service Charges

Service charges on small accounts will not go into effect in Pittsburgh and suburban banks Tuesday, the Sun-Telegraph learned today.

While banking leaders here awaited official confirmation of a suspension of the service charges from headquarters of the American Bankers' Association, scheduled to begin with the code January 1, they unanimously agreed temporarily to hold up institution of the code.

The bankers' association was to act on orders of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator.

Moving swiftly last night, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington, the Recovery Administrator ordered that the charges proposed by the banking code committee be suspended "indefinitely and immediately," or at least until he had approved them.

ORDER TELEGRAPHED

No official word has been received here, Arthur E. Braun, president of the Pittsburgh Clearing House, said today.

The general's order followed the dismissal of Cary N. Weisiger, Jr., in charge of the banking code, whom he blamed for an erroneous press announcement that Johnson had approved the high schedule of charges, according to the International News Service.

In the order the Recovery Administrator said:

"The statement in your standard rules that they have been approved by the National Recovery Administrator effective January 1, 1934, is not correct. I had never even seen these rules until I saw them in this morning's New York papers. These will be suspended indefinitely and immediately until specifically approved by myself in person.

"The time for filing acceptable rules to govern fair trade practices is hereby extended 30 days. You will please immediately inform all interested parties including everyone to whom you have sent these standard rules to prevent those rules from going into effect in any region."

At the time of the order a meeting of bankers, members of Group Eight, met in the William Penn Hotel and telegraphed a protest to Gen. Johnson. The group was composed largely of outlying bankers. They gave unanimous approval to a resolution of protest drafted by A. M. Johnson, president of the Freeport Bank and Trust Company, of Freeport.

GIRL FLIERS END RECORD FLIGHT

Weary, Make Graceful Landing After Nearly 10 Days in Air

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Exhausted from battling rain squalls and choppy winds, Frances Marsalis and Helen Richey landed at 10:45 a. m. today, completing the longest sustained flight for women, 237 hours and 50 minutes.

The women took off December 20 from the Municipal Airport and equalled the previous record of eight days four hours and five minutes at 5:08 p. m. Thursday, establishing the new mark officially one hour later.

The biers came in with a graceful landing in the face of a brisk wind. Members of their ground crew and Department of Commerce Inspector James R. Puckett went down the runway to greet them.

A cheer rolled up from the spectators and the fliers waved back. The plane taxied up to the airport administration building for an official welcome.

COASTER DIES; COLD ABATES

The cold spell which gripped Pittsburgh since Christmas has been broken. Moderate temperatures prevailed today with a prediction of snow or rain for Sunday.

Last night there was a tragic sequel to the passing of the cold wave.

John Nagle, of 1308 Mississippi, died from a broken neck shortly after the crash. Lynn Freeman, 18, of 1116 Hillsdale avenue, suffered a probable fractured pelvis and was taken to the South Side Hospital.

Man Gets Cold Feet Winning 50-Cent Bet

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Mario Orlando got cold feet. He acquired them proving he didn't have cold feet.

The acquisition occurred with the thermometer registering one above zero, as Mario flinchingly paced off 300 yards in his bare feet around the City Hall. Mario did it to win a 50-cent bet.

3 Alarms Sounded For Coney Blaze

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Fire broke out in a Coney Island drygoods store early today and for a time firemen feared it would spread to numerous frame buildings nearby.

Fear of frozen fire hydrants caused firemen to sound three alarms immediately, but they had little trouble extinguishing the blaze. Before the fire was under control, however, it had damaged a shoe store and a warehouse close by.

M'NAIR FIRM IN FIGHT FOR MALONE JOB

Councilmen, Ministers Defied on Cabinet Appointments

Unperturbed at the rumpus he has caused both in ministerial and political circles by his cabinet appointments, Mayor-elect William N. McNair has informed the Democratic Councilmen-elect that the list is going in as announced and "that they could do what they pleased with respect to confirmation."

The Mayor-elect took this stand when he was told by the four Democratic Councilmen that they do not approve his appointments of James F. Malone as head of the Safety Department, Leslie M. Johnson as Director of the Department of Public Works, and William R. Dunlap as Director of the Department of Property and Supplies.

This information was conveyed to McNair late yesterday at a conference with John M. Huston, John J. Kane, Thomas J. Gallagher and Walter R. Demmler, who will enter City Council Monday.

RESENTMENT SHOWN

Their meeting with McNair was their first official knowledge that he had made the appointments, though previously he had said that the Councilmen would be asked to co-operate in the formation of a cabinet. During the day the Councilmen had learned of the appointments through the newspapers, but neither they, County Chairman David L. Lawrence or Joseph F. Guffey had been consulted.

There was a patent resentment at what some conferees charged as a turning of the most powerful

GRILL BLONDE IN TAXI 'PARTY'

A 23-year-old blonde by the name of "Billie" was to be questioned by state police today as to her part in a 450-mile taxicab ride which ended near the Oakland Police Station last night.

Kenneth Maze, 23, of Portsmouth, O., said to be the driver of the cab, and a passenger, Daniel Howitt, 29, of Johnstown, told about the young girl at a hearing today before Magistrate John J. Sweeney.

Patrolman John J. McGrath testified that he arrested the men at Forbes street and Meyran avenue last night when he noticed their peculiar actions. In the cab he said he found a revolver, a blackjack and a sandbag.

Maze said that Howitt engaged the cab in Portsmouth Thursday morning and then picked up a blonde who went by the name of "Billie." He then directed him to drive to a town 20 miles away.

When they reached their destination, Howitt pointed a revolver and told him to drive to Pittsburgh, Maze asserted.

PACKAGE RUM SALES ENDING

Liquor in packages will go off the market at midnight tonight. When the sale resumes Tuesday, the commonwealth will be the dispenser.

The fellow who can't gather together the necessary dollars for his New Years liquor by midnight must restrict his legal quaffing to one-by-one drinks in hotels, clubs and restaurants on New Years Day, after 7 a. m. Package sales in those establishments will be taboo tomorrow, New Years and thereafter.

Indications are that when the package sale begins in state dispensaries Tuesday, the flow will be reduced greatly, because few of the stores will be ready to operate then.

STORES CLOSED HOLIDAYS

The first store in Allegheny County—in Coraopolis—will be ready today, according to Roy A. MacGregor, agent for the State Liquor Control Board, and one downtown Pittsburgh dispensary was expected to be ready to open Tuesday.

Unlike Christmas Day, there will be no package sales on New Years, because the liquor control laws provide that the state store

POLICE TAKE DESPERADO AFTER GUN BATTLE

Prison Break Leader, Massacre Suspect Believed Dying

International News Service.

SHAWNEE, Okla., Dec. 30.—Wilbur Underhill, notorious desperado and once co-leader with Harvey Bailey of the Bailey-Underhill gang, was wounded critically today when he shot his way through a line of 17 city and federal officers who had surrounded a house in the northern part of the city.

He was captured about 7 a. m., in the business district, three hours after the gun battle, clad only in underwear.

Underhill's wife was captured by the officers, and their two companions, Ralph Rowe and Eva Mae Nichols, were wounded.

The wounded were taken to Municipal Hospital and Mrs. Underhill, who married the desperado only a few weeks ago, was taken to jail.

WOUNDED CRITICALLY

Underhill was shot four times and his condition was reported as extremely grave. One bullet lodged near the base of his spine. In addition he suffered a scalp wound, a wound in his left arm and one in his right leg.

Miss Nichols was shot in the abdomen. Her condition also was described as critical. Rowe was wounded less dangerously.

Seventeen officers, including several federal officers led by R. H. Colvin, of Oklahoma City, surrounded the house shortly after 3 a. m., but Underhill, clad only in underwear, slipped through the line under furious gunfire. The other three were captured at the house.

An intensive three-hour hunt followed, terminating when Underhill was seized in the business district of the city.

When first questioned by officers at Municipal Hospital, Underhill refused to talk and would not admit his identity. When informed by officers that he had been identified positively he finally admitted, officer said, that he was the widely-sought desperado.

ACCUSED IN MASSACRE

Underhill has been the object of an intense nation-wide hunt since he and Bailey, now serving a life sentence in federal prison at Leavenworth for the $200,000

HUNT CONVICTS AFTER KILLING

ATMORE, Ala., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—The search for a band of convicts who killed one man and wounded another as they fled Atmore State Prison continued today on a widening front.

Twenty-nine convicts overpowered their guards and fled soon after they went to the fields to work Friday. Five of the prisoners were recaptured shortly afterwards and another was caught in Mobile last night.

Officers concentrated their hunt on a group of Negroes, heavily armed, who shot and killed Grover Kirby, a farmer, and wounded his companion named Parker as they sought to stop them.

In Montgomery, W. F. Feagin, director of the State Convict Department, said he had heard those escaping were angry because they did not receive Christmas paroles.

Tarentum Woman Burned at Stove

Mrs. Rose Hunter, of 415 East Tenth avenue, Tarentum, was severely burned at the home of her son-in-law, Albert Dawson. Her clothing ignited from a stove. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson and their daughter were slightly burned trying to extinguish the flames.

PLANE BURNS, 10 KILLED

BRUSSELS, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Ten persons, eight of them passengers, were killed when the Imperial Airways London-bound plane Apollo crashed in a fog near Ruysselde between Ostend and Bruges today.

The machine caught fire and the passengers, pilot and wireless operator were burned to death.

All the passengers were reported to be British subjects.

The plane was flying on the Cologne-Brussels-London route.

The disaster occurred at 1:05 P. M.

The plane was flying from Brussels when it crashed into the mast of a wireless station at Ruysselede in a fog.

The mast itself was broken in half from the force of the impact.

As the machine hit the ground, spectators rushed to the assistance of those trapped inside the fuselage a fierce outburst of flames drove them back.

GIRL TO ENACT SLAYING

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Authorities investigating the slaying of 8-year-old Josephine Woropay sought today corroboration of Mary Kavala's confession by asking the girl to enact the story of the crime she said she committed a week ago today.

The Kavala girl, who will be 13 years old next month, confessed she killed Josephine in a fit of temper, according to District Attorney Frank H. Coyne, but that official pointed out there was no corroboration of the confession and announced he was still investigating.

The District Attorney said, however, that "not much corroboration is needed for a story told in such detail." He disclosed he would take the girl to the slaying scene today or tomorrow and have her show exactly how she killed Josephine and disposed of the body.

He said he was still undecided what steps would be taken against the girl.

Blast in Carol's Room Follows Aide's Slaying

SINAIA, Rumania, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—An explosion in the royal pavilion and an attempt to slay the assassin of Premier Ion G. Duca marked this city's farewell today to the body of the government leader who was killed yesterday.

Mourners, thronging the railroad station in tribute to their premier, were thrown into a panic by the explosion in the royal pavilion in the station.

Hardly had the excitement subsided when the late Premier's brother-in-law, Radu Polizu, forced his way into the station guard room where the assassin, Nicholas Constantinescu, was held.

Polizu whipped out a revolver and fired several shots point blank at Constantinescu, but missed.

Polizu was overpowered and led away. He said he wanted to avenge the death of Duca.

The once bitter political enemy of King Carol, Duca was the victim of bullets fired by a fanatical student member of the anti-Semetic and Fascist Iron Guard party he outlawed three weeks ago.

Waylaid at a railway station as he prepared to leave for Bucharest after a conference with the King, Duca was felled by four bullets.

McNair and Shelton End Feud

Pastor Accepts Bid To Give Inaugural Invocation

Mayor-elect William N. McNair, who had invited the Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, downtown pastor, to his inauguration Monday to complain about James F. Malone, to be named Public Safety Director, changed the invitation today.

He asked Dr. Shelton to pronounce the invocation instead of argue. And Dr. Shelton accepted, explaining:

"I'll not criticize Mr. Malone so long as he does his duty. I have no quarrel with Mr. McNair."

Previously McNair said he would furnish Dr. Shelton a seat and allow him to furnish evidence that Malone was being appointed due to a political deal or take back the statement. Of this, Dr. Shelton said:

"I certainly have expected to attend the inauguration of my friend, Mr. McNair, in whose administration I am very much concerned and for whose welfare I devoutly hope.

"I would have been content just to mill around in the crowd—of which I am very fond—but I'll be very much pleased to have a chair on the stand. It's quite nice of him to provide me a seat."

Chance of Debate On Malone Balked By Invitation

The inauguration will take place in the lobby of the City-County Building—where McNair said he'd place his desk—at high noon, Monday.

NATIONALIZATION OF ALL GOLD SEEN AS NEXT U. S. MOVE

DEVALUATION OF DOLLAR TO FOLLOW

Roosevelt Expected to Fix Ratio for Currency

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—As the latest move in his monetary program, President Roosevelt plans to ask Congress for authority to nationalize the country's entire gold stock of 4,300 million dollars, congressional leaders told Universal Service today.

This would be a prelude to formal devaluation of the dollar, toward which the administration is heading, and would result in a profit of more than 4,000 million dollars to the government in the transaction.

DEVALUATION MOVE

While the White House and Acting Treasury Secretary Morgenthau said the government's new anti-hoarding order did not necessarily imply in itself ultimate devaluation, from high sources it was learned the move was a definite preliminary step to that end.

Before there is devaluation, officials assert, the government must have complete control of all gold.

A medium by which he can take over gold, including 3,600 million dollars held by Federal Reserve banks, is already before the President. It is the bill proposed by Senator Thomas (Dem.), of Oklahoma, to impound gold. The measure is before the Justice and Treasury departments for a report to the President.

PRESIDENT'S POWER

When and at what figure the President plans to devaluate the dollar will have to be decided by future developments, administration spokesmen said. The President is empowered to cut the dollar's gold content by 50 per cent, which would be the equivalent of paying $41.34 an ounce for gold. The present price is $34.06.

Instead of a 50-cent dollar in terms of gold, the President may decide on 60 cents or some comparable figure, guided by the commodity price level he is seeking to boost and stabilize.

Silver Drive Gaining Headway at Capital

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—(INS.)—The plan of a militant Senate bloc to force immediate remonetization of silver may be accompanied by an embargo on gold exports, except to settle international trade balances, it became apparent today.

The partial gold embargo may be the bloc's answer to charges that remonetization of silver would flood America with the world's silver supply while robbing this country of its gold reserves. Such an embargo, bloc leaders declared, would preserve America's gold reserves.

The silver drive gained headway, although running into some opposition. Conservative easterners opposed it generally, while some Democratic leaders revealed they would fight it unless it won President Roosevelt's support.

The President's closest friends expressed a belief he is heading toward remonetization of silver, but through a slow process which will convince the nation first that such a step is necessary to permanent prosperity. This group, declining to comment publicly, declared the President's gold buying campaign, plus the London silver agreement, could lead only to silver remonetization in the end.

DAVIS UPHOLDS WORKS PLAN

SHARON, Pa., Dec. 30.—On a flying visit here to give holiday greetings to his 82-year-old blind father, United States Senator James J. Davis stated the establishment of a sound dollar is the keynote of recovery. This, he said, would mean more confidence in business. He said:

"I am in favor of the public works program as we will be lending our money to American people. The trouble with us has been that we were too willing to aid the foreign governments and give too little attention to our home interests."

Senator Davis would not comment on the rumor that he would be a candidate for governor.

But Which Way Is It Headed? -:- By QUIN HALL

POLICE WOUND, NAB UNDERHILL

kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, wealthy Oklahoma City oil man, led a spectacular escape from the Kansas State Prison at Lansing last Memorial Day.

A reign of terror throughout the Southwest followed the prison break, and several of those to escape, including both Underhill and Bailey, were accused by the government with participation last June 17 in the Union Station massacre in Kansas City, in which four officers and their prisoner were slain.

Underhill has been identified, federal officers have declared, as the man who stood beside Bailey as the latter poured fire from a machine gun into the group of officers and their prisoner.

Underhill was not armed with a machine gun during the massacre, officers said, but carried an automatic pistol.

CONFESSION HELD RUSE

Underhill has been termed by officers one of the most dangerous criminals in the country and has been identified as a participant in numerous bank robberies throughout the Southwest since his escape from the Kansas prison.

Once he sent officers a "confession" to a robbery of a bank in Arkansas and to make his confession authentic he attached his fingerprints to the letter. Officers discredited the confession, as the robbery took place the day before the Kansas City massacre and they believed the fugitive was attempting to establish an alibi for the massacre accusation.

Several weeks ago he surprised officers by boldly walking into the County Clerk's office at Coalgate, Okla., and asking for a license to wed his childhood sweetheart. His action were so bold officers were not suspicious. It was several days after the ceremony when his true identity was discovered.

WARD LEADERS TO RETIRE

Two Republican ward chairmen, both employes of the city, will retire on pension Monday because of total disability, it was learned today.

Dr. F. H. Frederick, North Side chairman and president of the Civil Service Commission, will retire on a $120 monthly pension. The other is William A. Herd, of the Twenty-first Ward, superintendent of bridges in the Bureau of Engineering. He has been a city employe 15 years and will draw a monthly pension of $114.80.

Schramm to Give Mt. Lebanon Oaths

Newly-elected officials of Mt. Lebanon Township will be sworn in at mass ceremonies Monday night by Gustav L. Schramm, new judge of Juvenile Court and a township resident.

The officials are Robert K. Boyer, commissioner of the Fourth Ward; Samuel Meneilly, incumbent commissioner of the Second Ward; Don E. Hubbard, justice of the peace; Thomas R. Knowlson, incumbent tax collector, and Paul F. Kraber, auditor.

CITY CAN'T PAY SAFETY MEN

Salaries due police and firemen for the last two weeks of the year cannot be paid, according to an announcement by the City Treasurer today.

Payment by delinquent tax due bills, suggested by Mayor-elect William N. McNair, seemed pending as the new administration prepared to take office.

McNair said that his salary would probably be paid in due bills, and that if firemen did not accept such payment, he would organize volunteer departments in various parts of the city.

Opinion among firemen today indicated that the method is satisfactory to them. One fire chief said:

"If it's good enough for the Mayor, it's good enough for me."

Commenting that his $25,000 bond—which he deposited with the city clerk yesterday—cost him most of his first month's $833.33 salary, McNair said:

"But I've already sold my due bill—tell the police and firemen that."

He wouldn't name the purchaser.

Gus Tudas, 40, of Bower Hill, was in critical condition in the Allegheny County Home and Hospital at Woodville today with a fractured skull, suffered when he was struck by a passenger train of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Leetsdale late yesterday.

Railroad officials said Tudas, walking along the right-of-way, stepped into the train's path when the whistle sounded.

'ACID' BRINGING DYING TO LIFE DISCOVERED

Scientist Cites Cure Of Man Moribund Under Anesthetic

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—A new hypodermic which promises to call back from the verge of death persons suffering from too much alcohol, drowning, electric shock, surgical shock and asphyxia was announced to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today.

It already has been used successfully to restore quickly to life and health a man moribund from too much anesthetic during an operation. It was developed first for this kind of "recall" of persons who had sunk too deeply under anesthesia.

The treatment was described by Dr. Walter V. MacGilvra, of the Harvard University dental school. The treatment has a new Greek name, palinaesthesia. The hypodermic is intravenous injection of minute amounts of hydrochloric acid.

EMERGENCY CASE CITED

He termed the injection a "recall acid" and said investigations are planned to discover whether there may be other similar acids which might possess life-restoring powers perhaps over more range.

The treatment is still so new that the proper doses of hydrochloric acid have not all been standardized. But in an emergency at Worcester Memorial Hospital last July, he said it was used for the first time upon man.

The patient, Dr. MacGilvra said, was "moribund," due to unexpected effects of an anesthetic. The hydrochloric acid was injected at 10:15 a. m. Eight minutes later lips began to twitch; in 10 the hands moved; in 40 minutes the patient was talking coherently.

NO ILL EFFECTS FOUND

Repeated studies of this patient since, said Dr. MacGilvra, have failed to disclose any ill effects of the acid. It has been tried also upon six human beings who were not dying, but used to study its effectiveness.

In all these cases the "recall" acid speeded up respiration immediately, increased blood pressure and pulse, restored lost reflexes. It kept some of them awake afterward, which was annoying.

The after-sickness common to operations was cut down, and the patients were hungry sooner. The research at Harvard dental school is thus far confined to rabbits, cats, dogs and monkeys. It confirms the good effects found on human beings. Dr. MacGilvra said:

"Should we be permitted to speculate on other possibilities for life-saving with this idea in medication, we would suggest the sobering effect on the over-indulgent alcoholic, impending death from drowning, severe electric shock, surgical shock and asphyxia."

CAPTIVE MINE HEADS CALLED BY U. S.

Failure to Recognize Union Charged to Steel Pits

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Failure of a large group of steel companies to give the United Mine Workers of America complete and unqualified recognition at their Pennsylvania mines has brought an order from the National Labor Board for a hearing.

Senator Wagner, chairman of the board, yesterday summoned by telegram a dozen steel companies to appear at the hearing set for January 4. The action came at the request of John L. Lewis, president, and Philip Murray, vice president, of the union.

WANT CONTRACTS

The union officers want the steel companies to draw up labor contracts with the union for those mines which voted to affiliate with the United Mine Workers in elections the board supervised last month.

They also insist it is highly impractical for part of the mines of one company to be unionized and part non-union.

On the other hand, the companies interpret their agreement with President Roosevelt—the agreement which ended a strike—to mean that they must deal with the union officials only as individuals representing the miners, and that union contracts are not compulsory.

Several attempts at negotiations have failed to produce agreement.

The companies informed of the hearing were:

H. C. Frick Coke Company, Inland Collieries Company, Indianola Consumers Mining Company, Harmarville; Republic Iron and Steel Company, Russellton; National Mining Company and Vesta Coal Company, Pittsburgh; Allegheny Coal and Coke Company, Brackenridge; Sharon Limestone Company, Mercer; Pickands, Mather Company, Mather; Shannopin Coal Company and Weirton Steel Company, Pittsburgh, and Crucible Fuel Company, Rice Landing.

TELEGRAM SENT

The telegram sent them read:

"This board having been officially advised of the failure of your company and representatives of your employes at more than 10 days of negotiations to reach an agreement under the President's agreement of October 30, 1933, relating to captive mines and having been requested by the representatives of employes to decide the controversy pursuant to the last clause of said President's agreement, a hearing before this board in its offices in the city of Washington has been set for Thursday, January 4, 1934, at 2:30 p. m., at which time the board will hear all parties concerned and determine the matters in controversy.

"Please acknowledge receipt."

A company union official and a U. M. W. A. official vied for sixth place and the board ruled that this office be abolished to eliminate a run-off election.

positions in the city government over to M. L. Benedum, oil millionaire and party "angel." One Councilman, speaking with authority for the quartet, declared that the party pledges for a new deal in city politics had been made a scrap of paper by the action of McNair.

Whether the councilmanic quartet will vote to reject the McNair appointees for the three biggest cabinet jobs today was undetermined. Huston said there was no disposition to embarrass McNair, but that he and his associates were frankly displeased at the course of events. He made it plain that the personality of none of the appointees was involved in the dissatisfaction of the councilmen, but they object to the dominance of Benedum.

HARMONY CHANCE SEEN

Even should there be a decision to oppose Malone and Dunlop, the way may be cleared for Johnson, who is regarded by the councilmanic grooup as really representative of the independents who voted the Democratic ticket in November.

Malone and Lawrence conferred this morning in the latter's office. Neither would discuss the subject of their talk, but it was understood that Malone was endeavoring to clear away animosities and avert a fight on his confirmation Monday.

In view of the confusion which exists in the party on the eve of taking over the city government, the fight for President of Council may amount to little. Huston has been put forth as the Democratic candidate in opposition to Robert Garland, Republican.

A harmony arrangement may be reached by which Garland will become President of Council and Huston chairman of the Finance Committee.

Even without harmony, it is predicted Garland will win, for William A. Magee, who enters Council Monday, is represented as being so disgusted at the recent gyrations of the high command of the Democratic party as to be ready to vote for Garland. Some time ago it is known that Magee was ready to vote for Huston. His feelings have undergone a gradual change as he has followed the attitudes of McNair.

Magee met the four Democratic councilmen today, but all were non-committal. He expects to confer with the Republican group later today.

All Bottles Must Be Purchased From State Stores system shall operate beginning with the new year, and under that system stores will be closed on all holidays.

While 240 store managers and 116 assistant managers will go on the payroll as of Tuesday, 1,002 clerks, stenographers and other employes will not be employed until the stores to which they are assigned are ready for opening, the Liquar Board announcement said.

GIRLS WIN JOBS

Two Pittsburgh girls and one each from McKeesport, Arnold and Carnegie, have been added to the junior stenographer-clerks appointed, the State Department of Public Instruction announced in Harrisburg. Those appointed were:

Mollie Flash, 624 Lincoln avenue, and Jean W. Fitzgerald, 819 Melrose avenue, North Side, Pittsburgh; Betty Rogers, 3104 Carbett street, McKeesport; Anna M. Stulgis, 219 Seventeenth street, Arnold; Sadie M. Perilman, 325 Knox avenue, Carnegie, and Mary L. Corty, 907 Summit avenue, Johnstown. Ruth T. Fenton, of 313 Shenango street, New Castle, was appointed a secretary-stenographer.

Customers entering a state liquor shop will be greeted by smiles by the workers therein, if the Control Board's latest edict is obeyed. Instructions from the board to the employes state:

"Employes should be cheerful at all times and show this in their greetings to customers."

DUTIES OUTLINED

High school and college graduates who took the Civil Service examinations for jobs in the dispensaries will find they will have certain janitorial duties to perform.

The regulations require that the paving in front of stores must be swept, windows washed and all stores swept and dusted daily, preferably before opening for business.

The board will not permit employes to wear their hats while on duty and prohibits them from chewing or smoking tobacco while talking with a customer.

The regulations add:

"Boisterous or loud talking or other 'horseplay' must not be carried on.

WORK IN 2 SHIFTS

Included in the equipment of each store which the manager is authorized to purchase locally is a snow shovel, broom, mop, bucket, dustpan and brush. If the district superintendent determines that it is the duty of store employes to clean windows, the equipment is to be augmented by a window brush and a squegee with handle.

All stores must be opened promptly at 9 o'clock daily as the law requires, the instructions say. Each store will have two shifts of employes. One will go on duty at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and remain at work until 3:30 o'clock. The other comes on at 3 o'clock and remains until 10 o'clock at night. A half hour will be allowed to employes for meals during the time they are on duty. The regulations add:

"Employes of state liquor stores will be expected at all times on duty and off, to conduct themselves with propriety.

FAVORITISM BANNED

"Information concerning a store or its employes or the extent of its business must not be divulged, except, in the discretion of the manager, to persons he deems proper. Newspapers desiring information about the store and the extent of its business must consult the district superintendent on his next visit.

Unlike other state employes who are granted 15 working days vacation annually, those working for the Liquor Board will be allowed "reasonable vacation."

An elaborate system of record keeping has been drafted by the board for its store and warehouse managers. These reports are to be filed daily with the central office in Harrisburg.

Rules are to be drafted later by the board covering the subject of breakage. Employes are directed to keep this to a minimum.

Six Judges Sworn In With Legal Solemnity

Six judges were sworn into office today with legal solemnity.

Three were of Common Pleas Court, two of the County Court and the last the judge of the newly-created Juvenile Court.

The oaths were administered in the assignment room of Common Pleas Court. Crowds jammed the room and the corridor. Mayor John S. Herron was one of the many unable to gain admittance.

Retiring Judge James M. Macfarlane administered the oaths to the Common Pleas Court jurists. George A. Alter, former state attorney general, presented the commission of Judge Harry H. Rowand. Then Joseph A. Richardson presented Judge Ralph H. Smith's commission, and Dean A. M. Thompson, of the University of Pittsburgh Law School, presented Judge M. A. Musmanno's.

The three were sworn individually.

In the same room, President Judge Richard A. Kennedy, of County Court, administered the oaths en masse after commissions had been presented by Jacob Shulgold for Judge Benjamin Lencher; Blair F. Gunther for his father-in-law, Judge Frank A. Piekarski, and Marcus W. Acheson, Jr., for Gustav L. Schramm, who takes over the Juvenile Court.

Schramm, a former professor at Pitt, was the only one without previous bench experience.

J. R. Dickie, member of the Bar, and Judge Elder W. Marshall paid tribute to Judge Macfarlane, who leaves after many years on the bench.

Chicago Mayor to Keep Women From Bars

In announcing his decision he said:

"Womanhood should be held on a higher plane."

Since the return of legal liquor women in Chicago have been sitting down on stools in front of bars, sipping their drinks with the men, and the Mayor, after studying the situation, announced that he was opposed to the practice and would ask the the City Council to amend the liquor license ordinance to stop it.

The announcement was made in a statement yesterday, after which the Mayor left for a short vacation. The Mayor said:

"I am going to recommend that the liquor ordinance be amended to prohibit women from drinking at counters in taverns or any places other than regularly established restaurants, where for years past, a woman sitting at a counter has been an ordinary sight which created no stigma or bad impression of womanhood in general."

SKEPTICAL, POLICE HUNT VANISHED MAIL CARRIER

PLEAS OF WIFE START SEARCH FOR VETERAN

Missing Man Expected To Return Home; Poverty Denied

The Missing Persons Bureau, frankly skeptical about the disappearance December 19 of Joseph Oglesby, 53, for 26 years a mail carrier on Mt. Washington, today acceded to the request of his wife, Julia, and began a search for his body.

Oglesby, who lost his job as a mail carrier when he inadvertently "retired" a year and a half too early last September 1, had been despondent since learning that his service in the Spanish-American and World wars did not warrant him a pension under the postal employes' 30-year retirement plan, his wife told police December 20, when she reported his disappearance.

WIFE FEARS SUICIDE

The police, expecting Oglesby to show up, as he had after alleged previous disappearances, made no announcement until today.

What convinced his wife that he had carried out his threats of suicide, she told police, were three letters and a note he left. One of the letters was addressed to the Sun-Telegraph, another to a Mt. Washington undertaker and the third to the secretary of a veterans' organization. The family refused to hand over the letters as directed in a note Oglesby left to a daughter and a son-in-law.

The family denied that the poverty of his family, described by Oglesby in his note, is true. It was the police who today gave out the contents of the note. It was addressed to "Mary and Ed (Witalis)." Oglesby wrote:

"I cannot bear to hear the kids crying that they are hungry and asking about Christmas and its joys, knowing that we are to be put out on the street on New Years Day . . . They don't even have shoes to wear and their mother is broken-hearted . . ."

OLD JOB AWAITS HIM

He then referred to his disappointment and not being eligible for retirement, and added:

"Richard just came home for dinner. He is hungry and there is only a crust of bread for him——"

There was plenty of milk and other food, not to mention, the family said, Oglesby's stamp collection, recently appraised at several thousand dollars. Also he has letters from President and Mrs. Roosevelt (the signatures worth considerable) thanking him for contributions to their own stamp collection.

Added to all this is Congressman Henry L. Ellenbogen's assurance that if only Joe Oglesby will come back home he can go back to work on his old route at $150 a month until his 16 months' required service for a pension is up.

DOOMED TO DIE BY GAS, BOY STILL HOPES

N. J. Officials Ask Stay As Youth Looks To High Court

DENVER, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Walter C. Reppin, 18-year-old slayer, of Newark, N. J., today looked toward the Colorado Supreme Court as his only possible chance to escape death in the lethal gas chamber at the state penitentiary.

The youth's hopes that Gov. E. C. Johnson might commute his sentence to life imprisonment were smashed when the Governor announced he saw no reason why he could set aside the verdict of the Colorado District Court. Reppin was convicted of the murder of a taxicab driver.

The condemned prisoner's brother, Herbert Reppin, of Newark, who came West and sought leniency, was making plans to carry an appeal to the state's highest judicial body.

PLEAS SENT GOVERNOR

Walter, who told the judge who sentenced him to "make it snappy," now tells guards in the penitentiary at Canon City that "I don't want to die."

Meanwhile, two pleas have been dispatched from Newark to Gov. Johnson, asking him to delay the execution, which has been set for the week ending January 6. They were sent by Mayor Meyer C. Elenstein and United States Senator Hamilton F. Kean.

Both asked the Governor to defer the execution until a psychiatrist's report of Reppin's local background can be completed. The psychiatrist was engaged by the Newark Ledger to make the study.

GERMAN CHURCH RIFT GROWS

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Peace within the German Protestant church was believed farther removed than ever today after yesterday's rump synod of oppositional clergymen.

A conciliatory attitude toward Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller was shown in early deliberations of about 200 pastors who oppose the Nazi German Christian program and its "heresies" and the intrusion of politics into church affairs.

Later, however, this attitude gave way to beligerent antagonism when it became known that Bishop Mueller had ordered all clergymen in charge of youth work to Hannover tomorrow to instruct them how the agreement with Baldur von Schirach for dissolving Protestant youth organizations and merging them with the Hitler youth program is to be carried out.

Circus Girl Asks For $150,000 As Balm

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Maxwell Adelbert Baer, who wanders with equal facility from prize ring to stage to law court, is back consulting his lawyers again, and he says he's mad enough to fight.

A summons to answer within 20 days in State Supreme Court the complaint of Bee Starr, circus aerialist, in a $150,000 breach of promise suit, was handed Baer as he completed his chores in one of Broadway's newest and gaudiest night clubs.

The aerialist charges that Baer promised to marry her and broke his promise. She said the humiliation, distress and chagrin she suffered caused her to become ill. The promise was made on November 30, she said.

The summons did several things to the curly-headed husky from California who knocked out Max Schmeling in one of the big tussles of the past summer and who is scheduled to fight Primo Carnera for the heavyweight championship next June.

First, it sent him to the office of the Sheriff of New York County asking if something couldn't be done to stop people from taking legal advantage of a little fellow. He was told there was no law against suing people.

It wound up his career as a night club entertainer with a howl of "never again."

It brought him the services of a bodyguard, and aroused in him a deep and fervent desire to return to the comparative safety of the prize ring.

Finally, it brought forth the statement that as far as Miss Starr, who is in vaudeville here, is concerned, he "not only never met the lady, but can't even remember ever having seen her."

TOLEDO SLAYER DIES IN CHAIR

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Frank Vacchiano, 22, son of a well-to-do Dayton (O.) family, died with a smile last night in the electric chair at Ohio Penitentiary for the ruthless murder of a Toledo hotel clerk last spring.

Enraged because the clerk, John J. McLaughlin, ejected him from the hotel after he had registered with a woman not his wife, Vacchiano returned the following night, shot the clerk and fired at a bellboy and a prominent Toledo insurance man.

Vacchiano and Albert Bruno, also convicted of the McLaughlin slaying, were captured in Indiana after a series of holdups. The Dayton youth pleaded guilty to second-degree murder for killing a friend in a poolroom in his home town and was sentenced to life, but he was taken from prison to Toledo to stand trial for the McLaughlin slaying.

Vacchiano was suspected of other killings, including that of his father.

His wife told him she was tired of married life and left him, Eugene M. Clifford, of Homestead Park, testified before Judge Ralph H. Smith, who granted him a divorce from Catherine V. Clifford.

Divorce suits were filed by Berthella Hiller against George W. Hiller, Eleanor M. Stewart against William L. Stewart, John J. Davis against Helen B. Davis, Evelyn Lewis against George Lewis, Joseph Lewis against Margaret D. Lewis, Raymond Simmers against Eleanor Simmers, Helen Passaro against Michael J. $75,000 BLAZE AT TITUSVILLE

TITUSVILLE, Pa., Dec. 30.—The Masonic Temple, one of the oldest buildings in Titusville, was destroyed by flames early today, sub-zero weather and late discovery of the blaze hampering the work of the fire fighters.

Firemen estimated the damage at $75,000. Little more than the walls of the three-story building remains intact.

Valuable stocks of goods in the J. C. Penney store and the F. J. Blinzig drug store on the first floor were damaged by fire, smoke and water. The Penney loss was placed at $25,000 and the drug store at $10,000, with $40,000 loss on the building.

While the flames raged, guests in the Mansion House, a hotel across the street from the Temple, gathered up their belongings and left the structure. Firemen, however, prevented the blaze from spreading.

After David had escaped being slain by Saul's javelin he was warned by his wife Michal, Saul's daughter, that he was to be slain on the morrow. So Michal let David down through a window by night and he fled.

Michal then put an image in David's bed and covered it, and when messengers came to seize David she said "He is sick." And Saul said to her "Why hast thou deceived me so and sent away mine enemy?"

When David had escaped he went to Ramah and told the prophet Samuel all that Saul had done unto him. And thereupon Samuel and David went and dwelt at Naioth. And Saul learned where they had gone.

Saul sent messengers to Naioth to take David, but the Spirit of God was upon them so that they prophesied; then Saul went, and the Spirit of God was on him also, and he stripped off his clothes and prophesied before Samuel.

gasoline, could dig five thousand feet of such ditching in six hours.

"Technocracy" would have told you that was the trouble with the country, although the real trouble was lack of regulated production with no organized provision for consumption.

Civilized men will not give up machines to make more jobs for ditch diggers in the long run, nor will they abandon high speed passenger trains and go back to stage coaches in order to provide more jobs for coach drivers.

On one you would see the tall ancient lighthouse, the "Florida Light," looking out on the Atlantic, built more than 100 years ago when Florida belonged to Spain, of brick brought across the ocean in sailing vessels.

Indians attacked that lighthouse once, and of sixteen white men and one colored boy that took shelter in it, all were killed but one white man, the lighthouse keeper, and the colored boy.

They fled to the top of the tower and survived the fire, lighted inside by the Indians, that burned out the whole woodwork.

The "big wind" raised waves that swept away the shore to the very edge of the lighthouse. It might have fallen into the sea, had not the heirs of the Deering estate of Chicago saved the ancient structure with a new foundation of concrete buttressed with steel piling.

MANY ALLIGATORS live on the keys and the Negroes hear them bellowing.

Two days ago eight of them were crossing a road together. One giant, sixteen feet long, lives in a wooden enclosure, curled up in a small hole full of water.

The hatred with which he dashes out, opening his enormous jaws, and hissing, makes you shiver. That hiss would be valuable if it could be transferred to "Fafner," the dragon guarding the Rhinegold in Wagner's opera.

A man with one hand can hold tight closed the jaws of the biggest alligator. Their jaw-power goes all to closing and crushing, not to opening the jaws.

THAT ALLIGATOR eats live rabbits, but does not need many.

A seven-foot rattlesnake, one of six killed in the course of work today, had just swallowed a rabbit whole. The rabbit kept him stuffed out, he could not coil himself up, and, unable to coil himself, he could not strike. Killing him was "easy."

A BIG school of dolphins were plunging and rolling in their strange way around W. L. Philbrick's speed boat on the way back.

Nothing would induce a native to injure a dolphin, because it would be bad luck. When you are drowned the dolphin will push your corpse ashore and then nudge it up on the beach a little way so that your friends can find you.

This you will admit is extraordinarily kind of the dolphin, but who, once safely drowned and free from care, would want to be pushed up on the shore?

PUBLIC THANKS are due to Dr. W. W. McKibben, chairman of the Dade County Medical Society, for his devotion to the mosquito extermination work.

Others to whom credit is due, are J. B. Hull, of the Department of Agriculture; S. D. Macready, district sanitation officer; Fred Stultz and E. B. Hancock, sanitary officers; E. O. Smith, state engineer, and especially to the hard-working, patient Negroes that dig twenty feet of ditch through a tropical jungle, up to their knees in muck, six hours for forty cents an hour.

"Gambusia" is not the only mosquito-destroying minnow that deserves your thanks, although he is the best of them. There is another called "molonesia," and another "formosa," both names abbreviated, that deserve praise.

A MOSQUITO can fly twenty miles, no farther. With a four-mile breeze to help, she can fly as much as fifty miles. An eight or ten-mile wind is a hurricane for mosquitoes, forcing them to take refuge in the grass.

P. S.—For farmers:

On a few acres of those Florida keys are more than thirty thousand cocoanut trees in bearing, and cocoanuts drying up, going to waste, lie on the ground beneath them. It does not pay to collect and send them to market.

Three white men with an ax spent fifteen minutes chopping away one cocoanut's marvelous covering of fibre.

Then a Negro, with a record or stripping two thousand six hundred cocoanuts in a day, stripped three of them clean in less than a minute.

OCEAN 'PHONE WEDDING VOID

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—An unromantic government today had disapproved a recent wedding by trans-Atlantic telephone.

The marriage, on December 2, of Sofia Margareta Carlzon, of Sweden, and Bihrl Clason, of Detroit, while the bride was at her Swedish home and the man was on the other end of the trans-Atlantic hookup, was no marriage at all in the eyes of the Immigration Bureau.

Solicitor Charles E. Wyzanski, Jr., of the Labor Department, ruled the "purported marriage" between the couple by trans-Atlantic telephone, was invalid, and the "former" Miss Carlzon could not be admitted to this country as a non-quota immigrant.

The ceremony was performed by Judge John D. Watts, of the Michigan Court of Common Pleas. It was a six-way hookup.

On the Detroit end were head phones and transmitters for the Judge, the bridegroom and three witnesses. On the Swedish end, the bride said "I do."

Wyzanski declared the ceremony was invalid because the "purported marriage took place in Michigan where a statute requires that in the solemnizing of a marriage the parties shall declare in the presence of the magistrate or minister and the attending witnesses that they take each other as husband and wife."

ROOSEVELT MAPS NRA CHANGES TO AID SMALL BUSINESS

NEW POLICIES WOULD CURB MONOPOLIES

By PAUL C. YATES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The administration today was preparing major changes in the National Recovery Act and its administrative setup, to save small business men from threatened ruin and protect the public against monopoly.

Following a conference with Senators Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, and Nye (Rep.), of North Dakota, and National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, President Roosevelt announced that at least two major revisions in NRA policies seem necessary.

One of these, requiring no new legislation, would consist of an NRA board to protect small business men against huge corporations.

CURB ON TRUSTS

The other, necessitating congressional action, would clarify and strengthen the provisions of the National Recovery Act dealing with setting up of a board modeled after the National Labor Board.

The latter has done effective work under leadership of Senator Wagner (Dem.), of New York.

Legislative action probably will be necessary to make federal anti-trust laws fully effective against monopolies operating under NRA codes, Mr. Roosevelt declared.

The President's announcement upset predictions by Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill that a "hands-off" policy would be pursued toward the NRA.

FEAR DOUBLE ATTACK

The leaders fear that once this issue is reopened, a double-barreled attack against the Blue Eagle will be launched by conservative and progressive elements.

As one of the leading progressives, Borah carried to the White House a mass of figures and communications showing the plight of many small business men operating under NRA is desperate.

Borah also submitted data to indicate monopolistic practices, including price-gouging and profiteering, are being carried on under some of the codes.

When the national recovery bill was before Congress, Borah fought unsuccessfully on the floor to have the anti-trust law provisions made more definite and rigorous.

SPRAGUE RAPS U. S. WORKS PROGRAM

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—A closer approach to full employment and not artificial methods of raising prices is the formula for economic recovery advocated by Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, Harvard economist, who resigned recently as financial advisor to the United States Treasury.

Attacking the government's public works program yesterday in an address before the American Statistical Association, Sprague termed it "more damaging to recovery than the British dole." He said:

"Production of durable consumer goods is the way to employ capital and labor. A government policy that tends to maintain and increase the relative cost of that production works against a trade recovery."

He continued:

"You have a dole. It is perhaps better than a plain dole, but a work dole which establishes rates of pay so that civil works does not expand is quite as damaging, and I should say, more damaging to recovery than the British dole to which you objected so four years ago.

"If we got a closer approach to full employment, prices would go up and, in my judgment, not otherwise."

While he waited to address the association, the economists defeated an attempt to supplant Dr. James Harvey Rogers, professor of economics at Yale University, as a vice president of the organization because of his activities as monetary advisor to President Roosevelt.

He defeated, 56 to 53, Dr. Harold L. Reed, Cornell University professor of economics, who was nominated by supporters of "hard money" as opposed to the present unstabilized dollar. Dr. Frederick C. Mills, of Columbia University, was chosen president.

Job Applications Halt; Old Mines To Be Shut Here

Drawing a deadline on job applications, Ralph W. Gibbs, acting director of the State-Federal Employment Agency, today announced none will be accepted until further notice.

Gibbs said the office was flooded with applications yesterday, about 100 persons seeking every available job. Many have returned to register several times, he said, preventing clerks from interviewing other applicants.

The entire personnel of the office, Gibbs announced, will concentrate on placing men and women chosen from the application files. Registration will be resumed later, he said.

Occupation of the Marine Bank by a branch of the bureau, has been postponed indefinitely. The bank was to have been used as registration headquarters.

Approval was received from Harrisburg yesterday of a city project requiring 546 men to seal abandoned mines in Pittsburgh. Distinct from the federal campaign of mine sealing to end stream pollution, the work here will be for fire prevention, and is expected to close some 300 mines. It will start next week, according to Henry D. Johnson, of the Department of Public Works.

Other projects approved at Harrisburg included the grading of the County Airport, which will employ 200 workers, and a city low-cost housing survey, requiring 22 checkers.

N. D. Moeller, supervisor of the suspended county social survey, said last night the project will start soon, possibly next week.

Plans call for 1,540 workers. Headquarters will be at 105 Vandergrift building for supervisors, and at the Hunt Armory for enumerators. All employes, Moeller said, will get advance notice of the start.

First checks were being issued today by the CWA paymaster for the December 21 payroll. Timekeepers' books were turned in yesterday from 170 projects, with a total payroll list of 6,000.

CWA MEMORIAL WORK AWAITS APPROVAL

Authority was awaited here today for the employing of seven CWA workers to delve into the lives of approximately 200 people prominent in the history of Pittsburgh. From the list 25 names will be chosen to be honored by memorial tablets to be erected with federal funds.

A tentative list was prepared yesterday at a meeting of the Committee on State Memorials for Western Pennsylvania in the Chamber of Commerce. This committee is working with the County Commissioners, who have applied for the funds.

Among prominent names proposed for further consideration were Ebenezer Denny, first Mayor of Pittsburgh; Capts. John and Sam Brady, who organized the militia that protected white settlers here from Indians; Dr. John Brashear; Gen. Lloyd M. Brett, of the 80th Division; Stephen C. Foster and Gen. Alexander Hays, highest ranking officer in the Civil War from Western Pennsylvania.

The CWA workers, who will be employed by the federal-state employment office when an order is received from Washington, will conduct the survey under direction of the committee. Following compilation of the list, the committee will meet to select the 25 most prominent names. These will be submitted to the Commissioners.

Farley Confident of Success for NRA

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Postmaster General James A. Farley yesterday predicted that public support would carry the national recovery program to success. Addressing a meeting of the American Political Science Association on the functions of party committees, he said:

"I am satisfied that the NRA is going through successfully because the people are with the President and are going to stick with him."

HEALTHFUL FOODS FOR NEW YEAR

Variety Simple When Recipe Column Is Consulted

Start the New Year right by resolving to cook both healthful and appetizing foods for the family during 1934. Meals, of all things a housewife does, Prudence Penny insists, should be prepared with care, not in a slapstick, who-cares-anyway manner.

Don't tire the family by serving the same dishes week after week, month after month. If variety is the spice of life, it certainly is also the spice of good cooking. Variety of menues is not hard to obtain, Prudence Penny will tell you, when you have such an assortment of prize recipes presented to you every day in the Sun-Telegraph.

Take an active part in the contest that is bringing you so many fine recipes by sending your favorites to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. No recipes will be returned.

Today, in addition to the list of prize winners, Prudence Penny is publishing a recipe for marshmallows and marshmallow creme which she took from her own private recipe file in order to answer immediately the request of Mrs. Saul Kushner, 362 Lawn street, for these confections. It follows:

MARSHMALLOWS

Two cups sugar.
Half cup hot water.
Few grains salt.
Two teaspoons gelatine soaked in cold water.
One teaspoon vanilla.

Cook sugar, salt and hot water to soft ball stage. Remove from fire and add soaked gelatine. Pour mixture in a large bowl and beat until the mixture holds its shape. Add vanilla at last. Pour into pans and dust with equal parts of cornstarch and powdered sugar. When set cut in squares and roll in the powdered sugar and cornstarch mixture.

MARSHMALLOW PASTE OR CREME

One cup sugar.
One-third cup milk.
Quarter pound of marshmallows.
Two teaspoons hot water.
Half teaspoon vanilla.

Heat sugar and milk slowly to boiling point without stirring, and continue boiling for six minutes. Cut marshmallows into pieces and melt in double boiler, add hot water and cook until smooth. Add hot syrup gradually to marshmallow mixture, stirring constantly. Beat until cool enough to spread. Add vanilla.

ASTROLOGERS ASK LICENSE

Licensing astrologers through federal and state laws today was the objective of the National Astrologians' Association meeting in convention at the Hotel William Penn.

The association, according to its president, Dr. Henry J. Gordon, of Pittsburgh, plans to place the science on the same plane as medicine. Every astrologer will have to take a state examination before practicing, Dr. Norris said. The city of Columbus already has a licensing law.

A code of ethics also is being drawn up by the delegation. Dr. Norris explained that ethical practice will require that no horoscope will be sketched without approval of the subject.

Attorney P. M. Cancelliere is vice president; Mrs. Martha E. Knotts, secretary, and G. D. Gamel, treasurer, all of Pittsburgh.

JUNIOR PATROL

Two more days and there won't be any more 1933—the bells will ring in 1934—New Year!

The world is now beginning the second third of the twentieth century, fellows.

We have seen wonderful things happen the last few years. There will probably be even more wonderful things during the coming years, and maybe in 1934. You boys and girls who are members of the Junior Patrol will soon grow up, and the country is looking to you to make things better than ever.

The last year has not been happy for many people. We must all work together and help others to make things better. There is plenty of food and clothing and fuel for everybody if we can just find a way to make it go around fair and square.

Lucy Morrone, of Presto, Pa., writes this letter:

"I am going to have a club of 11 members and I am sending you 11 pledges to get them. I have been reading the Junior Patrol Mail Box and I think it is very interesting. The girls have signed these pledges and they promise to obey the rules. I was elected captain of the club. The name of our club is the Sunnyside Club. We are going to try to have the best club in the neighborhood. Please send the armband and the cards. I know we will be proud members when we get the cards."

We are sure you will be, Lucy. And we wish your club lots of success. Please write us again and tell us what you do to have fun and what you are doing to help others. Maybe one of your members would like to send us some pictures, and write a description of your town and neighborhood.

Now here's a letter from Betty Ann Ferrell, of 152 East Pike street, Clarksburg, W. Va., who writes:

"I am sending four Junior Patrol pledges so that I can become a leader of my group. Please send me the armband and four buttons.

We will make a note, Betty, that you have sent four pledges and when you send at least six more we will send your armband. But you must be elected captain by at least 10 members. That's the rule, you see.

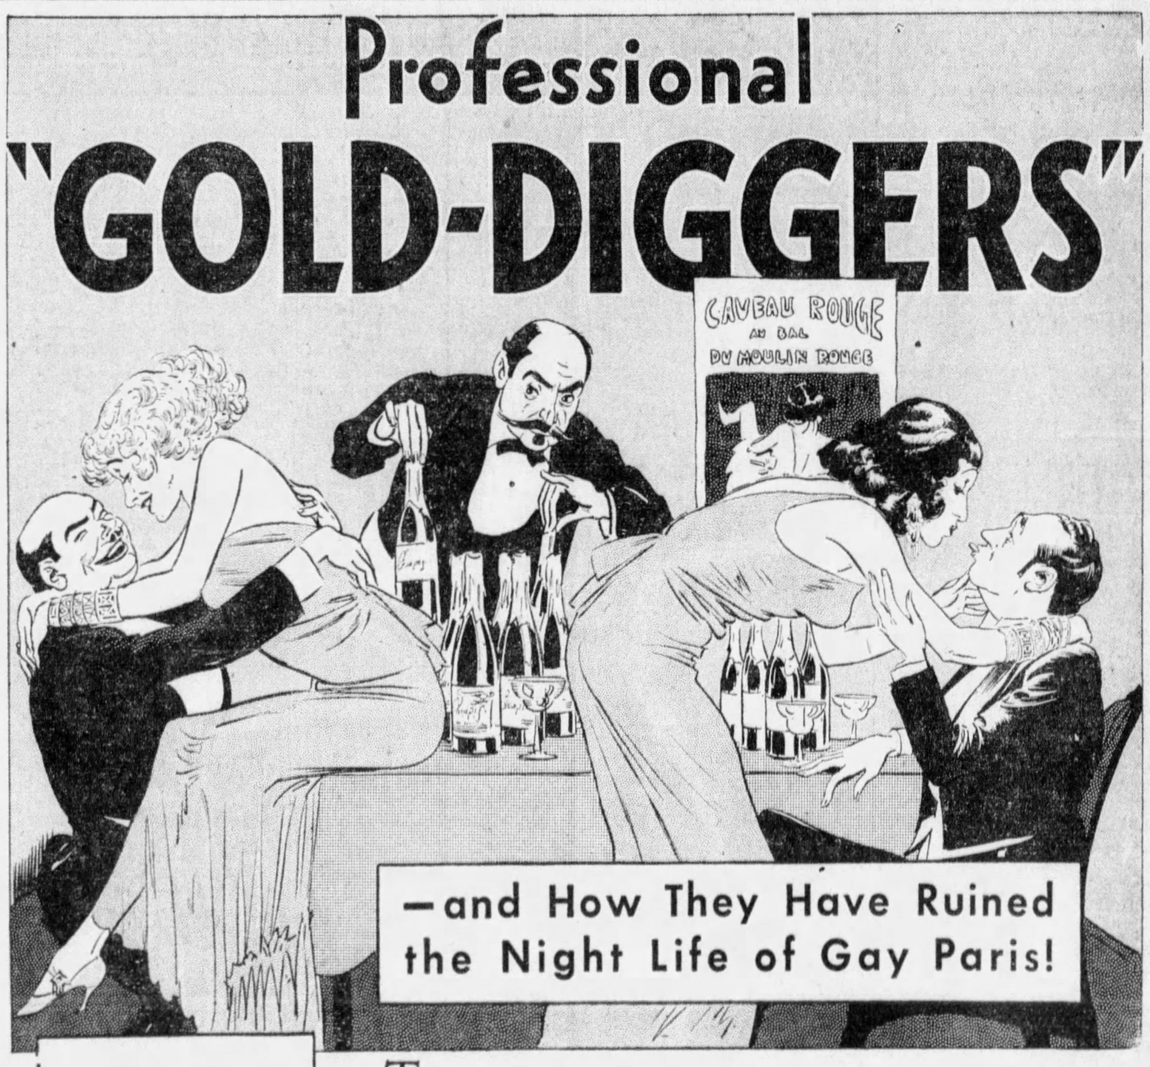
"GOLD-DIGGERS"



—and How They Have Ruined the Night Life of Gay Paris!

THE brazen wiles of "painted ladies" and the swindling tricks of thieving waiters have ended Montmartre's reign as "the playground of the world." This section of gay Paris which formerly re-echoed the wild yells of revelers is now steeped in the calm of a sleeping village.

The beacons of joy kindled on Montmartre have burnt out, one by one, simply because of the outrageous "rackets" which cleaned out the pockets of visitors. Every sort of skin game was played on unsuspecting guests, as revealed in an article in next Sunday's American Weekly exposing many of the swindles. Don't miss it!

* * *

Another birthday greeting is heard over WJAS at 10, when the mother of Bill McCormick, Byrd Antarctic Expedition pilot, speaks to him across 10,000 miles of land, sea and ice.

Bill, who becomes of age (21) today, returns his mother's greeting.

Resolutions Suggested For Radio

By AIRCASTER

Resolutions!—Yea, we make them; Not to keep them—but to break them!

Excepting Winchell, who sent in his resolution in typewritten script, which read "0000," nothing has been heard from the kilocycle clan as to what they are swearing-off.

It may be an indication that they are not making any resolutions this year, and if that is the case, I should like to suggest a few.

Far be it from me to shy snowballs at silk hats, but it seems to me that Hubert Vallee might better stick to sentimental love lyrics when he sings.

His "Geetle dong leetle dodgie" rendition of the "Roundup" has a Chinese flavor; and I suffer for him when he sings in Negro dialect.

Incidentally, I saw a few eyebrows raised when he jazzed up "Joy to the World, the Lord Has Come," and "First Noel" Thursday night.

* * *

WYNN AND PEARL

To Ed Wynn and Jack Pearl I should like seriously to suggest the resolve to depart from their current set style of programs, for novelty, if for no other reason.

Both comics are consistently amusing, but it seems to me that their routines have become dulled by the march of time. A bit of fresh spice would be as beneficial to themselves as to the audience.

* * *

To some of the local drama producers—A change of voice; a bit of new talent, would bring joy to the world and foil the folks who talk back to the loud-speaker villain or hero—"You can't fool me, so-and-so, I know you too well."

* * *

GIGGLERS

To Stoopnagle and Budd, and other variety wags, one can only propose that they continue capering "As is."

And the same goes for Phil Baker, and Olsen and Johnson, the latter two improving themselves somewhat by resolving some of their giggles out of the studios.

* * *

To Jack Benny—"As you were!" without forcing unnecessary love-interest into your stanzas.

* * *

A change in routine—possibly some semblance of continuity injected into their continuity—would not make a bad resolution for Burns and Allen, who have plenty to worry about, now that Block and Sully are being groomed for the air.

* * *

To Eddie Cantor I would propose fewer Rubinoff razzes and less logrolling for Georgie Jessel.

* * *

SENTIMENT

Don Voorhees' bandsmen seemed to put everything they had into their last Show Boat show Thursday night, as if to set a pace for their successors next week—Gus Haenschen's lads.

Charlie Winninger's (Capt. Henry's) "Hap-py New Year!" hadn't the old-time ring to it. Obviously, he wasn't happy over Don's departure.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Christmas is past, but the spirit lingers on. It is found embodied in the countless Christmas trees still blazing in front rooms of countless homes. There is something sad about dismantling a tree, and especially so if it's one on which much ingenuity, not to mention many hours, has been spent.

If you have friends, and they have trees, and you want to do them a special favor, go over and see their trees before they are taken down. Most trees retain their place in the living room corner up to, and including, New Years day.

* * *

One of our globe trotters has invited me over to see her tree. She is Mrs. Sinclair, of 605 Redknap street. She tells me that it is unique inasmuch as everything pertaining to it is in motion. I might not be able to go over myself, but some of her neighbors I'm sure will find the opportunity.

* * *

Allen Abels and many other Trotters are interested in the contemplated re-examinations for liquor store jobs. If the same routine is established for the next examinations, if any, then the requests for application blanks will have to be made from the Department of Public Instruction, Harrisburg.

The applications, filled out, are returned to the Public Instruction Department and, if the applicant is eligible for the position he seeks, a number of directions are sent to him for taking the quiz.

COUNTY BUDGET CUT $452,777

With all but salaries and a few holdover items considered, the county budget today had been reduced $452,777 below original requests.

Finishing regular departmental slashing yesterday, the County Commissioners had cut the budget total to $20,225,392.

Discussion of salaries must await the consideration of the Salary Board, which will not convene until next week.

Behr Estate Left To Wife, Relatives

The estate of Louis A. Behr, late president of the Rosenbaum Company, was given an estimated value of $300,000 for purposes of probating the will, filed yesterday.

Principal beneficiaries are Mr. Behr's widow, Mrs. Elsie R. Behr; a brother, Herman Behr, of Germany; two sisters, Mrs. Emma Winters and Mrs. Rosa Hecht, and two nephews, Ludwig and Yetchen Behr.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 30.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Roosevelt is the most consistently good radio man there is. Just when you would think there is nothing of importance to be said that hadn't been said, he comes on Thursday night and gained over a 100 million new friends outside of the U. S. and perhaps that many here. By announcing that the U. S. was not going to mess around in any South or Central American country with a gun.

Will Rogers

It was his best speech of all. If he had just gone a little further and said "We not only won't interfere, but we won't have any battleships peeping in the window while you are having your party." While we didn't land troops in Cuba, we were close enough that they all could have waded ashore.

Yours, WILL.

WOMAN'S CRIES ROUT ROBBER

North Side police today sought a man who attempted to rob Mrs. Josephine McCoy, 40, rear 422 Avery street in East Park way.

Mrs. McCoy, mother of six, was returning home from Allegheny General Hospital, where she is employed as a waitress, when the thug seized her and attempted to drag her into a lot, police said. When she screamed he struck her in the face.

Christmas Seal Returns Urged

Prompt returns were urged by the Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh today in order that complete results of its Christmas Seal campaign may be known as soon as possible. A large number of seals are still outstanding and unaccounted for, league officials said.

The campaign is held annually to raise funds for support of the organization's county-wide program for the prevention and control of tuberculosis.

POLICE CAPTURE STOLEN TRUCK

The desire of Henry McGuin, 30, of 244 Swope street, East End, for a ride in an automobile, "just any kind of a machine," led to his arrest by East End police, they reported early today.

Police said McGuin selected a well-filled meat truck, parked in front of a restaurant at Frankstown avenue and Broad street, where the driver, Charles Besty, of 620 Thompson street, was eating.

After their offering, "Fiesta" at Syria Mosque last night, the Princeton Triangle men wiped off the grease paint, and were off to form the most glamorous stag line that Pittsburgh debs have had this year.

The stag line formed at the dance at T. A. McGinleys and Captain and Mrs. Cyrus R. Miller gave last night in the Pittsburgh Club for Gertrude McGinley, of Milton, Mass., and for Marian Mackie, of Princeton, N. J.

Gertrude is the daughter of T. A. McGinley, and Marian is the niece of Mr. McGinley and Mrs. Cyrus R. Miller. Before the play, the hosts for the dance gave a small dinner for the debs and one for a group of their own friends.

There is always a special quality about entertainments of the exclusive Pittsburgh club. Although it is the smallest and the simplest of all the smart clubs in town, it has an aristocratic simplicity and dignity none of the rest achieve.

'400', Literally, Seen At Pittsburgh Club Dance

The Pittsburgh Club belongs to the day when society was a much smaller, more closed group than it is now. Here is one club where the so-called "400" really can be seen—for because of the smallness of the ballroom, 400 is really the guest limit. And 400 at the Pittsburgh Club is a crowd.

Green smilax and smilax painted silver—very lovely it is—entwined the stairway leading down from the girls' dressing room to the foyer outside the ballroom. And more of the smilax and silver smilax decked all the lights.

In the foyer where the receiving party stood were the buds' gift bouquets. And the doorway at the top of the stairs had an arch of smilax. And fragrant balsam trees were placed everywhere.

In the ballroom there was a drop curtain at the back of the stage depicting a village scene on a winter's night—clear blue sky and snow everywhere.

Debs of Honor Wear Distinctive Costumes

For the two small dinners before the Princeton Triangle play, red poinsettias with ferns centered the tables, lighted by white taprs.

A charming gown of white net, woven with diagonal lines of white velvet, was worn by debutante Gertrude McGinley. Over the shoulders were brief circular ruffles of the material. And her only ornaments were an emerald and rhinestone buckle and a matching clip and earrings.

An interesting rough crepe gown in apple green, shot with gold threads, was worn by Mrs. T. A. McGinley. The gown had a jacket—reaching just below the waistline—of the same material having a scarf of kolinsky.

Mrs. Miller appeared in white satin with rose for accent; Mrs. Norman Mackie, Marian's mother, in gold brocade; Mrs. Oliver Wallop, of New York, a guest of the McGinleys, white, threaded with silver.

Triangle Club Attracts Many Before Dance

One of the most stunning gowns worn at the Triangle play—and later at the dance—was that of attractive deb Mary Gordon. It was of black lace, with wings over the shoulders—of starched ruffles of the lace. And there were three ruffles at the bottom of the skirt, which had a slight train.

An unusual gown of silver satin was worn by blonde Margaret Taylor. Constance Drake chose coral bagheera, and Alice Brown wore a lovely gown of delicate blue and silver, brocaded in a leaf design. Margery Hillman was in red velvet, Eleanor McKennan in a bright red crepe dress with a train.

Analana Beeson appeared in sapphire blue bagheera, Fredericka Holdship in deep coral crepe.

Others I saw at the Triangle play, most of whom were at the dance later, were Marnie Hodge, Dorothy Blaxter, Katharine Dangerfield in pink satin, the F. G. Gwinners, the III, the Junior George L. Craigs, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Milligan, Margaret Phillips in white crepe, Gwendolen Holmes in pink satin, Alice and Mary Rust, Annette Chester and Florence Willock.

Others were Katharine Frazer, in black net with a long train, Eloise Dorrance, in black velvet, Mrs. H. D. Williams, Mrs. Nelson Vance Harper, Mrs. Lyle Nelson, Sally Jane Fields in blue crepe, Peggy Mitchell, Peggy Robinson, Virginia Doyle, Mrs. Putnam Goldsbury (Margaret Ramsburg), the Edwin Rheas, Elizabeth Jenkins, and Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins.

Louise Collier Makes Bow at Tea-Dance

Attractive Louise Collier, daughter of the J. Z. Colliers, is being presented at a tea dance today by her parents in the Twentieth Century Club. Louise is wearing a crepe gown of olive green made with a graceful train with rhinestone clips as the only trimming and a hat of gold and green. She is carrying a muff of gold lace and Talisman roses, daisies and other spring-like flowers.

Mrs. Collier is wearing pansy velvet, made with long sleeves, and a silver and pansy velvet hat. Her corsage is of gardenias. The tea is very small, with only the members of the young set as guests.

For her bridal costume, she has chosen traditional white satin, with a draped neck-line, long, tight sleeves, and a train extending from the skirt. Her veil is of tulle, cascading from a cap of duchess lace, worn by the bridegroom's mother and by her mother in turn at their weddings. She is to carry gardenias.

From Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson's love of Browning, Mrs. Charles L. Reizenstein took the color and decorative idea for the luncheon given yesterday by the Council of Jewish Women as a farewell to Dr. Goldenson and his wife.

It was given at the Hotel Schenley, with covers laid for about 100. At Mrs. Reizenstein's request many of the guests came dressed in brown; the table flowers were brown and gold chrysanthemums, and brown candles stood in brass holders.

Around the edge of the honor table was a border of Browning volumes, and one volume, containing the autograph of every person present, was presented to Dr. Goldenson. Accepting it, he spoke of the pleasure derived from the Browning class which he had conducted. In tribute to Mrs. Goldenson, Samuel and Sara Kliachko gave a beautiful recital of Russian and Hebrew numbers for 'cello and piano.

SWANK SPORTS OUTFITS FOR SNOW MAIDENS

By PRUNELLA WOOD

NO ONE would suppose that there are styles in winter sports, but the fact is that skating and ski-ing seem to be the chosen amusements this winter. No one has much to say for snow shoeing as a major diversion, and the children have taken to tobogganing except on the very fast runs where professionals do their greased lightning stuff.

In Canada, the Adirondacks, the Poconos, and the Berkshires, the most unexpected people are taking to skis, leaping off into space as if flying were as easy as walking.

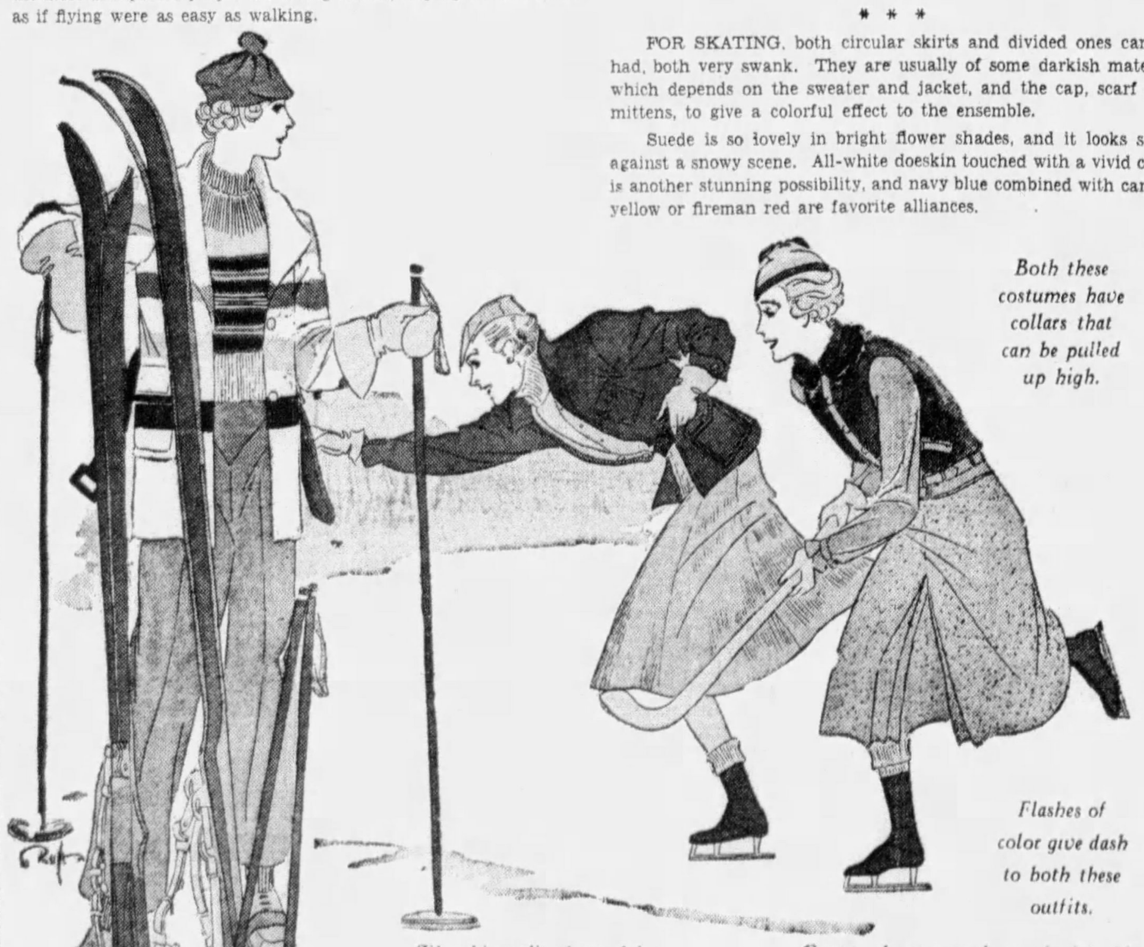
CLOTHES FOR these strenuous sports are really important. Woolly underwear with long sleeves and legs is practically essential to the ski-er, and usually two pairs of wool socks are worn, too. Woolen mittens slipped over leather gloves is another excellent accessory.

It is a bright idea to have two jackets, one with sleeves, and one without, the latter made of some soft leather. This piece can be worn over a light sweater on mild days, and under a storm jacket in severe weather.

* * *

FOR SKATING, both circular skirts and divided ones can be had, both very swank. They are usually of some darkish material which depends on the sweater and jacket, and the cap, scarf and mittens, to give a colorful effect to the ensemble.

Suede is so lovely in bright flower shades, and it looks swell against a snowy scene. All-white doeskin touched with a vivid color is another stunning possibility, and navy blue combined with canary yellow or fireman red are favorite alliances.



Both these costumes have collars that can be pulled up high.

The ski outfit above, left, is as practical as it is swank. The pants are snow cloth, with a yoke top, the sweater is white lamb fleece banded with gay colors, and the brushed wool jersey and socks are also giddy. Cap and mittens are snow cloth.

Center, above, a corduroy skating skirt, circular and cut off just below the knees. The jacket is snow cloth, with a detachable chamois vest. The cap is chamois, and the mittens woolen. Right, a tweed divided skirt, a capeskin jacket with lamb's fur covering, except for the sleeves, and striped Schiaparelli cap and mits.

TELL IT TO ELSIE -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By ELSIE ROBINSON

Women Accused of Being Spoiled and Pampered

Are American women painted, pampered hussies—cry-babies and bum sports—

Such, sisters, is George's opinion of you, and you, and me. And if you haven't had your daily battle yet, here's your chance.

Dear Elsie Robinson:

Of course, being a woman yourself, you probably won't dare to print this, but I think it would be well to do so, and let American womanhood see its faults. I and many other well-known men have the same idea on that subject.

Women in this country are the most spoiled, pampered creatures in the world. All they ever think about is a good time, a comfortable spot to light, special privileges, being babied and petted and complimented—those things and money.

GRASPING FEMALES

They want expensive clothes, and fancy food, and a swell apartment or house. They marry old men, through greed for money. The American husband has no rights at all, according to them.

And the average man is fool enough to fall for their valuation of themselves. When he gets interested in one of them, he gives in to her in everything. He spoils her with expensive entertainment and gifts, to win her regard or "win her heart" as the poor sap puts it. And what hearts!

Why should men be fools? Why should they pet and pamper their way into a noose? Women never are as serious, they never love as truly, as men.

Of course, I know a few wives who love their husbands "in spite of hell and high water." But I am talking about the rank and file of selfish, thoughtless, grasping females in this country.

WARNS WOMEN

People wonder why so many men don't marry. It's because they're getting wise to themselves. If a man has to support a woman, and put up with all her bossing and her demands for special treatment when he marries, he is better off single. And a lot of men are beginning to wake up to that fact.

And when, on top of that, a woman runs to the divorce court every time she gets irritated because she can't have her own way—well, why should we men bother with them?

They get peeved over nothing and ditch us, and because we have been fool enough to marry them, they collect alimony for the rest of their lives—or at least expect to—and turn into she-devils if we can't pay.

Nine women out of ten expect to be pampered, praised and petted. And for what? Because they're good wives! No! Because "they're women," and just naturally have it coming to them, no matter what they do! They have no worries about earning kindness and consideration.

I say that women would better wake up and get next to themselves. They would better come off their high horse, or the men are going to stage a revolt and have nothing to do with them. What do you think about it? GEORGE.

WHAT ABOUT MEN?

What do I think? You'd be surprised!

Obviously, of course, one of these despised females has failed to appreciate you, Georgie Porgie—hence the hollering. Yet in spite of that—and here's the surprise—I partly agree with you!

I, too, believe that many females think they've a right to demand the moon "just because they're women." I also believe that the divorce and alimony racket is a disgrace to our courts and our sex. In short, I agree heartily that many a Modern Mama is a bully, a two-timer, a loafer and a romantic racketeer.

But just where does that leave you men?

What has happened to your stalwart sex, Georgie, that we are able to gang you like this?

For, believe me, if girls go gangster, it's a fairly good sign that men have gone ga-ga.

And while Georgie's chewing on that—what about it, ladies?

Do we, or do we not, fit the picture? Are we, or are we not, getting by with murder?

'THE BOY FRIENDS' -o- -o- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Jill doesn't believe in going along on one boy-friend. Four at the least she has around holiday times, and all four can be depended upon to make Jill's life brighter. And Jill likes hers bright, bright as the heavenly-colored reflections on the fragile "beauties" that they hang on Christmas trees. Bright as tinsel, and a child's Christmas smile.

Commonly Jill goes about with just two fellas—the dearly beloved with the smooth dark hair, the gray hat and gloves, the humorous eyes and the devoted heart. Just dear Jack. Jill's sweetheart. He fills the horizon almost. All but a tiny corner, where Cupid may slip in. He's the other of the usual two. Small and insignificant in size, gilded of head, blue of eye (color of violets which are for thoughts) dewy of lip, he goes along where ever Jack and Jill may roam.

But when the holidays come 'round on the constantly turning, never still, wheel of the days and the years, two other beaus come calling, roly-poly Santa Claus, quite an elderly gentleman (unlike Cupid he SHOWS his age); and the "glad" New Year, a callow youth all dressed up, almost too young looking, but interesting nevertheless, for what he may have in his pockets for Jill! The old gentleman too has boundless potentialities in the way of gifts. His are material, wonderful to receive, but often worn and forgotten; unless Jill has the child-like mind that can read the real kindness of the ancient Saint. Mr. Glad New Year may have material good cheer too, but what a girl wants of him are high things of the heart and spirit, Happiness, Good Fortune, Freedom from trouble and worry, Love, the Happiness of those she loves. . . . And now I think of it, in this anxious year of approaching Nineteen Thirty-four, after all, the Happiness, the Good Fortune, the Happiness of those we Love, Freedom from trouble and worry, all depend upon material things. All save Love. Jill is thankful that she CAN love without any money at all. It has been done. —NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

Pajamas for Hostess?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly advise me whether it is appropriate for a hostess, when entertaining and giving a dinner, to wear silk lounging pajamas? The dinner is to be served at 8 o'clock in the evening. R.

Such informal attire would not be appropriate for the hostess to wear when she is giving a dinner. The very designation of "lounging" would indicate this. How about the hostess wearing one of the handsome new hostess gowns, say in velvet.

Plates and Towels

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I know someone who not only uses the service plates at the start of formal dinners, but also uses them for the last course. In other words, if it be a dessert served on plates of the salad type, this course is placed on top of the service plates. Is this correct?

2—I have received a gift of three lovely finger-tip towels. These towels seem so hopelessly small . . . please advise me as to the correct manner of using them. R.

1—This use of service plates isn't at all customary, and if we wish to be strictly de rigueur, we wouldn't use these plates in this way. But several important china manufacturers tried very hard several years ago, to make this use correct, and occasionally we do see this done. However, it's always better to adhere to traditional and conventional customs when we are giving formal dinners, and so it is best to use the dessert plate under the dessert dish when the sweet course is being served. As a matter of fact, too, the service plate would be a bit large, in proportion to most of the dessert dishes that are used.

2—I'm a great enthusiast for finger-tip towels, for they serve such a special purpose . . . the purpose for which they are so delightfully named. And not only are they convenient for the user, but what a convenience they are to the hostess. So often, in the bathroom, we just wash to moisten our hands and "dab" them on a towel just this size. The fortunate hostess who possesses these convenient bits of linen hangs a supply of them on the towel rack nearest the wash basin. Always with them . . . for other people who may consider the finger-tip towels "hopelessly small" . . . there should be hung several regulation-sized hand towels or face towels.

These finger-tip towels come in a delightful range of shades, and the artistic hostess can arrange these shades to give a charming effect of color. Also these finger-tip towels gain special charm when they are monogramed. And they make a grand present!

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

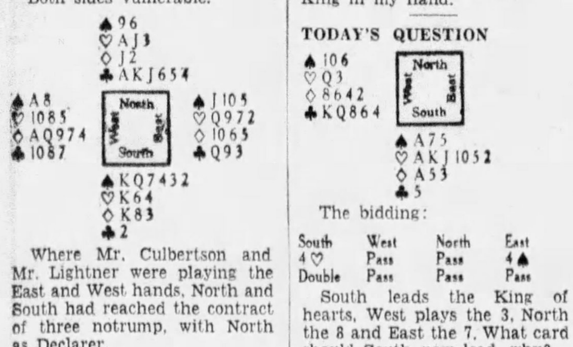
Defensive Play

One of the tests applied to determine the skill of any Bridge player is the standard of defense which he maintains when faced with a difficult defensive situation.

In the recent Vanderbilt Cup tournament, Mr. Theodore A. Lightner, a member of the Bridge World team, playing with my husband as partner, rose to brilliant heights in his defense of the hand below:

North, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



Where Mr. Culbertson and Mr. Lightner were playing the East and West hands, North and South had reached the contract of three notrump, with North as Declarer.

Mr. Culbertson opened the heart deuce, which was won by the Declarer, who returned a spade, upon which the Queen was played from Dummy and which Mr. Lightner won with the Ace. Realizing that if the contract was to be defeated it would require unusual measures, Mr. Lightner now made the beautiful return of the diamond 7. This the Declarer won with the Knave, but when Mr. Culbertson later regained the lead with the spade Knave, he returned the ten of diamonds and permitted Mr. Lightner to cash four diamond tricks.

I, with my partner, Mr. Albert H. Morehead, played the same North and South cards in a contract of four spades, which was made. The method by which this was accomplished was by preventing East from obtaining the lead until the trumps had been cleared and the club suit established for discards, thus preventing the lead of a diamond through the King in my hand.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	4 ♠
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

South leads the King of hearts, West plays the 3, North the 8 and East the 7. What card should South now lead, why?

Answer—North has two hearts at most and so East is marked with three. South should lead a small spade to trick 2. He must then regain the lead before East can go game, and can pick up two heart tricks and defeat the contract even if East has no diamond and the Ace of clubs.

It would be poor play to lead out the Ace and another spade, as, if East has the clubs solid, he might win 10 or 11 tricks in spades and clubs.

Madge Surprises Avis on Sabotage Expedition

The little warning bell so beloved of novelists rang deep in my consciousness as Avis voiced her plea that I go downstairs and be comfortable, and leave her to herself while she "prinked." That some secret plan lurked behind her ostensible reason for asking privacy I was sure, but I was glad that Marion and Carolyn apparently suspected no ulterior motive in her request.

"Isn't that a hot one?" Carolyn queried when we were safely out of earshot.

"'I never fuss much, goodness knows,'" Marion quoted, with deadly mimicry of Avis, "except for a complete set of eyelashes, a keg of rouge and lipstick and a barrel of powder."

Carolyn commented caustically, "Let's go and report to the boys how their big moment for the evening is progressing. Coming, Auntie Madge?"

"Not just yet, dear," I answered easily. "I want to look in at my young lady daughter for a moment."

"Kiss her for us," Marion adjured me fondly, but when they were gone it was not to the nursery that I went. Instead, I slipped around a corner in the corridor and sat down upon a chair from which, myself almost hidden, I could command a view of the door of my room.

Just what I expected I did not know, but I was not surprised when two minutes later, the door of my room opened stealthily and Avis put her head out.

AVIS SURPRISED

She first looked cautiously up and down, then slithered out of the door—I thought of a cobra as I watched her—and stole down that hall toward the door of Lillian's room. She held a small bottle in her hand, and when, having come up noiselessly behind her, I uttered her name, she thrust the bottle into the folds of her kimona and stood with one hand clasping and hiding it.

"I'm glad I didn't take you at your word, Avis," I said cheerily and casually. "I was afraid you'd need something, so I hung around. What can I do for you?"

"It's silly of me," she said, with a patent effort, for I undeniably had startled her. "But I've forgotten just where the bathrooms are. I've visited in so many homes, you know, that I get all mixed up."

"The nearest one is right here," I said, indicating it. Then I drew a chair over to the window and sat down.

"You mustn't worry any more about me," I said. "I haven't a thing to do, and I'm going to stay right here until you're ready to go down. No, it's no use you're saying a word. As you young people are fond of saying I'm 'on the job,' and I intend to stay on it."

She looked obliquely at me for a second, and I think she fully comprehended my meaning. But she cleverly masked whatever chagrin was hers.

LEAVES BOTTLE

"It's very sweet of you," she said, as she went into the bathroom, "but it's totally unnecessary. However, I can see you're a very determined lady."

"My slangy young people would tell you that 'you don't know the half of it, dearie,'" I said, smiling at her, and then the door closed behind her.

I picked up a magazine and pretended to read, congratulating myself that I possessed enough presence of mind to see that the thing was right side up. I pretended to be absorbed in it when Avis came out of the bathroom, but my eyes furtively followed her, and when she had closed the door of my room again, I found myself tremulous with the excitement of a discovery.

She had not brought back with her the bottle which she had thrust into the folds of her kimona when I had accosted her.

With eyes apparently fixed upon my magazine, I studied her closely, and confirmed my first impression. Her kimona was so thin, almost transparent, that there was no possible hiding place in it unless a hand helped in the concealment, and her hands were both free and swinging as she came along the corridor.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Childbirth No Longer Ordeal

A great deal has been written on the important subject of childbirth. Yet few persons are really familiar with the facts concerning this vital phase of human life. I have before me a recently published book called "The Story of Childbirth," written by an eminent obstetrician. It is well worth reading.

Dr. Copeland

Hardly a day passes that I do not receive a letter asking questions about childbirth and its associated problems. For example, many ask whether webbed feet, cleft palate, harelip, extra fingers or toes, and other defects are hereditary and passed on from one generation to another.

Let me say in passing, these deformities are not transmitted from parent to child. They result from some interference in the normal fetal development.

Recently I received a letter from an expectant mother who bemoaned her lack of appetite. She feared her child would suffer since she was unable to "eat for two," as her friends advised. Contrary to a popular belief, this is not necessary. In fact, eating for two is not advised by modern physicians. The prospective mother should gain about 15 to 25 pounds during her term. But the food during this period must be simple, nutritious, easily digested and eaten in moderate amounts. The size of the baby is only moderately influenced by the mother's diet and exercise.

A question that troubles many women is the possible need of a "Caesarian operation." With the advancement of modern surgery, improved instruments, safe anesthesia and other essentials, this formerly dreaded procedure is no longer to be feared. Of course, where everything is normal, as it in in 75 per cent of cases, the usual and normal delivery, aided mainly by nature, is the simplest and preferable method. But where this is not the case, particularly where the life of the baby and the health of the mother are at stake, the Caesarian operation is the method of choice.

Within the past decade the greatest advancement made in connection with childbirth has been the improved methods of anesthesia. Childbirth is no longer the dreadful ordeal of former years. A properly administered anesthetic diminishes the pain, hastens the delivery and cannot harm mother or child. The method called "twilight sleep" is no longer advocated. It has been proven unsatisfactory and has been replaced by other safer and more successful anesthetics.

No one will deny the marked advancement and increased knowledge relating to childbirth. Every young family should be familiar with these facts. Increased knowledge and familiarity with modern developments lead to greater safety and better health for mothers and babies. More than this it gives peace of mind, and nothing can be greater than this.

A Child's Friends

By LISA GRENELLE

Is Tommy going to grow up to be a sissy? If he does, it will break his father's heart; yours, too.

Nine mothers out of 10 have seen in their small sons unmistakable signs of physical cowardice; a seemingly incurable tendency to cry not only when they're hurt, but before they're hurt; a fear to attempt this or that; a fear to play with some other boy.

All Tommys are little cowards, as their mothers and fathers were before them. All, that is, except those who are too dull or too insensible to feel the great fundamental protector—"fear of danger." Otherwise, the only difference is that some children learn to control and hide their fear much sooner than others. Perhaps they were less sensitive to begin with, or prouder, or were put "on their own" sooner.

Some children, naturally gregarious are so desirous of approbation and leadership among other children that they learn self-control early; learn to hide their fears before others.

But there is a sensitive type of child, naturally more self-sufficient, for whom the lesson of self-control is very hard. His need for children of his own age is not so conscious or apparent as to force him forth of his own accord—and the disease of "sissiness" is rarely if ever cured at home, even by hard and wise parents. The child is too sure of the affection of his parents. They will stick by him and love him no matter what he is or does—whether he is a "sissy" or not. And so he becomes lazy, and keeps away from other children who would taunt him.

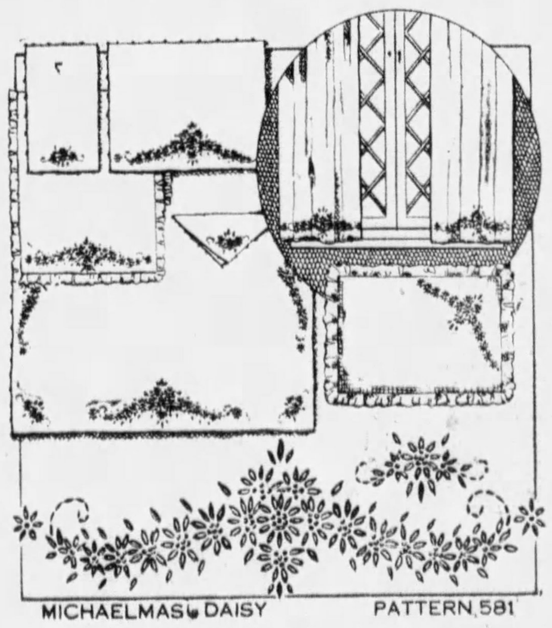
Even the wisest parents cannot bring up their children unaided. There comes a time when a child needs more than the tenderness of a mother, the sympathy of a father; when he needs the savage, intolerant treatment of his own kind. For he must learn that among them he must fight for his "place in the sun," no longer given him gratis.

So the sooner a child gets used to children of his own age the better. If, however, he is advanced for his years, let him play with children a little but not much older; if immature, vice versa. And don't any more than is necessary choose his companions for him. Let him choose his own, even though they may seem less desirable than those you would pick.

Instinctively the child chooses what he needs for his own development at the time. He will soon outgrow an inferior companion. It is unwise to bring him too much in contact with a child that he can bully, or to let him play constantly with a child whose personality is obviously too strong for him, and greatly overshadows his.

Let children work out their own relationships to each other, even if it does take a few sulks, howls and tantrums.

LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



Michaelmas Daisy Blooms on Linens

In early fall our fields and roadsides have been brilliant with the Michaelmas Daisy. In all varieties—in all shades of orchid, it beautified the countryside. And why then, with all these fine qualities should it not decorate our linens, especially when it lends itself to the simplest embroidery stitches and effective massing of color? The motifs are suitable for a variety of articles that are necessary in every household, such as towels, pillowcases, teacloths and luncheon sets, as well as many small articles. Though the Michaelmas Daisy usually is orchid, it can be done in any color, using either a shaded thread or different shades of the same color thread.

Pattern 581 contains a transfer pattern of six motifs 3½x11 inches and 12 motifs 1x2½ inches; a color chart; detailed directions and yardages for using the motifs on a variety of linens.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Household Hints

Less gas is used, and more heat given, if once a week the rings are taken off the stove and boiled for a few minutes in water to which a little soda has been added.

For a tasty cold meat jelly cut any or all sorts of cold meat (preferably white meat) into mouthful-sized pieces. Make a good horseradish sauce, mix enough powdered gelatin to set it, pour it over the meat when it is on the point of setting, stir it so that the meat is scattered through it, set it very firmly, and then turn it out on a bed of lettuce. Make the sauce with cream, if possible.

Jumbles, delicious little biscuits, are very quickly made. Sieve one-half pound of flour and rub into it six ounces of butter. Add three ounces of castor sugar, two ounces of blanched, chopped almonds, and a little grated lemon rind. Moisten with a beaten egg and a spoon of milk, if necessary, to make a stiff paste. Roll out, cut into rounds with a fancy cutter, and bake in a hot oven from about eight to 10 minutes.

+ ON BROADWAY +

Boudoir Elegiac

Of mignonne measures haunting old violins,
Of faintest fragrance in a billet doux,
Of vintage wines, of laughter and of sins,
I found a trace of all of these in you.

To eyes that were a miracle in gray,
To lips that always smiled in scorn or song,
To all your thousand moods from grave to gay,
I give a toast—May life do you no wrong.

From turgid bottom of a battered heart,
From ecstasy to exit in review,
From one about to bow and then depart,
I ask one question—then our love is through.

For pity's sake—O, thank you for my hat—
Are you aware, beloved, you're getting fat?

Gag

Harry Herschfield forwards the one about the group of executives of a big Broadway movie theater. At 3 o'clock the other morning they were using crowbars and other implements on their building trying to remove a huge part of it. A cop ankled along.

"What's goin' on here?" he bellowed.

"When we put up this building," explained one of them, "we put in the cornerstone a $20 bill—which we could use now."

In Other Words

Form of Criticism

Bill Goldhardt, treasurer of the Avon Theater, and a pal were discussing the merits and demerits of a new musical piece which both had witnessed trying out in Philadelphia.

"What that show needs," said the pal, "is a good doctor."

"It is my idea," differed Bill, "that what that show needs is a priest!"

By Way of Report

Some showmen are plotting against the local dramatic critics. Their new play, "Talent," is setting a precedent by offering nine performances—with no critics invited to sit in judgment. Advertisements in the gazettes announce that fact. At the tenth performance the critics will come.

It is thought that the show owners are experimenting to see how much harm critics do. If the play does business for nine performances and then the critics knock it, and if after their notices the business dims—the management will argue loud and long with a strong plea that the dramatic critics hurt the theater.

Novelette

Charles Bickford, the movie star, pulled a beau geste that rates an orchid. He was feuding with his employers, so he opened a garage across the street from the studios, and put his name in huge lights out front.

This irritated the boss, who compromised with a new and better contract. Then Bickford turned the garage over to a charity.

First Night Stuff

It was at the premiere the other evening waiting for the curtain to lift at the promised 8:35. For a long while after that a seat neighbor kept asking who was who.

"Who is that over there?" he asked.

"That's George Jean Nathan," we said.

"Who is that in the fourth row?" was the next query.

"That's Burns Mantle, another critic," we obliged.

"And if you don't mind," was the last question, "who are they in the front row on the aisle?"

"That's Mr. and Mrs. Hassenpheffer, the hope of the American theater," interrupted Percy Hammond, "they pay for their seats!"

Noel Coward saw the travesty on him in "As Thousands Cheer" as soon as he returned from the old country the other day. He was furious over the last line (a parody of his own "Cavalcade") — "Here's to Noel Coward. May he find happiness and peace and dignity again!"

Coward burned. He asked that it be changed.

His friend, Alexander Woollcott, upon hearing of Noel's squawk, judiciously said:

"If Noel can say that about England, why can't the show say it about him?"

Film 'Design For Living' In Stanley

By MICHAEL SHAW

When Ben Hecht had finished adapting Noel Coward's "Design for Living" for the movies, he boasted that only one line of the original remained. The result may be viewed on the Stanley screen this week.

The story is still about "three people who love each other very much," but the situations are different, the principals are different, and the lines are characteristically Hecht instead of characteristically Coward. Hecht has, in truth, left but one phrase from the play, and that the trifling "Good for our immortal souls," in the drinking scene.

Well, then, here is a brand new play, to all intents and purposes, and it is a most amusing play, deftly directed by the great Lubitsch and competently presented by Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March, Gary Cooper and Edward Everett Horton. The Horton part has been built up to an importance far beyond that of the corresponding part in Coward's play, and the veteran film comedian provides many of the picture's funniest moments.

The theme is "love among the artists," as Gilda so scornfully said in the stage play, and the scene shifts from the Paris quarter to London and New York. Miss Hopkins, as Gilda, is equally in love with Mr. March, as a playwright, and Mr. Cooper, as a painter. They attempt an unconventional menage a trois, with a "gentlemen's agreement" to forget sex; but Miss Hopkins finds unfortunately that she is no gentleman.

After deceiving Mr. March and Mr. Cooper successively, she leaves them both for a marriage to the excessively bourgeois Mr. Horton.

For a time she feels that her "feet are on the ground," but when the artist and the playwright return, in immaculate evening clothes, from their voyage round the world, she finds them irresistible. After a hilarious scene, the incorrigible three flee the Horton home in a taxicab, and at the last glimpse are laughingly joining hands in a new "gentlemen's agreement."

Those who saw Noel Coward, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in the Coward "Design" at the Nixon last year will perhaps find the Hopkins-March-Cooper performance a little lacking in exhuberance and audacity.

But there, they are playing in Mr. Hecht's "Design," and that is a different task, and one which they perform very well.

Comedy Film In Warner

By LORA D. UNKOVICH

Naughty, naughty, screams the keynote of "Convention City," the Warner's not-too-good selection for a New Year laugh-producer. No one behaves in the entire film; it just isn't done.

The whole thing is a tangle of husbands and wives making merry in a bad, sophisticated (entirely separate) way, while little boys and girls do their darndest to go wrong. What plot there is, centers about Atlantic City as a convention town where show girls have merry pickings and bootleggers are kept running.

Characters you have galore. Adolph Menjou is the blase salesman, sporting heavy circles under his eyes, who believes the result, not the method, is what counts. Women's wiles are nothing to him but a means to his own ends. Dick Powell, his room-mate at the convention, might be a rah-rah college boy in a campus romance.

Mary Astor, as a worldly-wise business woman, hangs on to Menjou's coat tails, while Joan Blondell fleeces the celebrating salesmen of the Honeywell Rubber Company, making good use of the badger game. And, believe it or not, she forgets to reform in the final fade-out.

Guy Kibbee, hen-pecked and afflicted with a wandering eye, is Menjou's rival for the job of sales manager of the corporation, but with Atlantic City as the film pictures it, there are a few too many good times and the job goes to ever-reeling Frank McHugh.

Bedrooms and negligees figure in the story which insinuates that every convention is a riot of immorality. Women are bad—men like them that way—and situations are the spice of life . . . and what a life!

"Convention City," listed as 99 99/100 per cent sure comedy, is most certainly not even the remaining 1/100 per cent pure comedy.

Alice, Vallee To Part

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 30. — If what the gossips say about their feelings for each other is true, Rudy Valee and Alice Faye soon will face a lovers' parting.

For Rudy must go East in a few weeks to fulfill his radio and night club engagements.

And Alice has just signed a four-year contract at Fox, where her screen debut is the talk of the whole studio.

They are giving Rudy credit, too, for an extremely unselfish gesture. He held a personal contract for Alice's services, but when her opportunity came for a film career, he waived his rights and allowed her to sign with Fox.

The rise of the little singer is one of those magic success stories that Hollywood is famous for. She came out to sing one number in "The Scandals," "Oh You Nasty Man!" Just at that time, Lilian Harvey had an argument with the studio and dropped from the cast. Before Fox could replace her with a "big name," they heard Alice's number and promptly shot her into the vacancy.

Little Charlotte Henry ("Alice in Wonderland") gets her biggest thrill from a poem just written to her by Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, wife of the speaker of the House of Representatives. It follows:

"To walk in a veil of illusion,
To live in a waking dream,
Accepting every delusion,
Take things just as they seem.
Think for yourself intended
The smile of the farthest star;
Live thus and life is splendid,
But beware of things as they are."

The little actress had luncheon with Mrs. Rainey during her personal appearance tour, and the meeting inspired the poem.

The String Symphonic Ensemble under Oscar Del Bianco gave its second concert in Carnegie Music Hall, and, considering the season, before a surprisingly large audience.

Through the programs of this organization we are hearing for the first time so much unfamiliar music that for this reason alone should we make every effort to encourage attendance at these concerts. But Del Bianco has done more, too, and his playing last night was characterized by finesse in musical expression as well as by vivacious spirit.

FLORINE M'KINNEY, M-G-M ACTRESS, DEPICTS THE SPIRIT OF NEW YEARS EVE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

All for a Pal

GEORGE is a Wall street man. There aren't as many around these days as there once were, but a few of them are still holding on very nicely. George is one of the few.

Our friend had been married eight years. When the ceremony took place, the society gossip columns predicted great things for the charming couple. Which is exactly what happened—until George began to stray.

He wasn't a very bad strayer. That is to say, he didn't have more than one new love every year. That, I suppose, is not a very exciting record these days.

The most pleasing thing that George did was to return to his wife after each affair.

"Ethel," he would cry, "I have been a fool. I'm not fit to kiss the ground you walk on. On my knees, I beg your forgiveness. It's you I love, dearest, and nobody else in the world."

And, believe it or not, it worked. Yes, sir. All in all, the wife forgave her husband six times during the eight years that they were married.

On the last occasion, however, Mrs. George grew just a trifle weary.

"George," she asserted, "you are doing this to me for the last time.

"You may not sense it, George, but there's a limit even to the things that I can stand. I am giving you your last chance. You'll either change your ways—or we're through."

"Dearest," he said, "I give you my word of honor that I'm through with other women from this moment on."

Strangely enough, George meant every word he said. And, to make the strangeness a little more complete, he actually kept his word.

Some six months later, George and his wife were sitting in the main dining room of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. It had been six months of happiness.

As George sat toying with his menu, he suddenly smiled. For, walking through the door, were two Wall Street boys whom he knew intimately. With them, although they were both married, were two girls whom George had never seen before.

George didn't rise and extend a cordial greeting with his friends. There was a slight gesture of recognition—but no more. George knew the racket.

Time went on. The two Wall Street boys were dining peacefully with their blonde companions. Everything seemed to be going smoothly—but it was only the calm before the tornado. Into the picture stepped the wife of one of the men.

George leaped to his feet to warn the unsuspecting husband. As he did so, the other man saw her. He jumped from his chair, dug his hand in his pocket and handed George a slip of paper.

"Keep it for me, George," he breathed. "It's the name and address of the girl I'm with. Here comes the bride and there's going to be a swell scene. The girls will probably blow—and I don't want to lose track of mine."

The scene wasn't so much after all. The two girls left. The wife sat down and talked vigorously. Finally, the three left together.

The following evening when George returned to his home his wife didn't waste any time at all. She handed him the little note that had been slipped to him the previous night.

"I found it, George," she said quietly, "and you know what it means. I just want you to know that I'm suing you for divorce immediately."

"My friend last night," he cried, "He gave me that in the Waldorf. Don't you —"

Her reply was a laugh. And what a nasty laugh!

"If you want me to refresh your memory, my dear man," she interrupted swiftly, "there's a note on this slip of paper in addition to the name and address. 'I think the world of you, honey boy,' it says, 'Don't forget to call.' Honey boy, eh?

"We're through, George."

Today George is broken-hearted. His wife divorced him in Reno.

But, he points out, isn't it all just like a woman? Six times, when he was wrong, she forgave him. And when he did nothing, she divorced him! . . .

Plays and Players

Because of the interest in the engagement of Joe Cook in "Hold Your Horses," in the Nixon the week of January 8, the seat sale will open at 9 o'clock Monday morning, January 1, at the box office. Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon, says "Hold Your Horses" will be the outstanding musical hit of the season.

'Dinner at 8' Is Featured In Penn

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Dinner at Eight," that swell photoplay version of the stage hit of the same title, sure did pack 'em into the Penn yesterday. This is the first showing of the picture at popular prices.

"Dinner at Eight" is a story of what happens when a formal dinner is arranged. Billie Burke, as a socially inclined matron, frets about the event, arranged in honor of a couple of visitors from England, members of the elite. As she magnifies all the little troubles she has while preparing for the event, there is real drama going on, affecting her guests, and her family. Such as an affair of her daughter with a no-good actor, the critical state of her husband's health, the threat of the loss of his business, and a tragic termination of the "affair," but a termination that saves the girl from disgrace.

It is all so well acted that it is difficult to pick one artist above another, but few who see the picture will object to John Barrymore being mentioned first. His portrayal of the passe actor, a drink-sodden swell-head, is a high spot, if not THE high spot. Wallace Beery and Jean Harlow easily come next, as man and wife, rich and scrappy and no culture whatever. Next would be Miss Burke.

Edmund Lowe, as a doctor with more than medical interest in his lady patients; Lee Tracy, as an energetic theatrical agent; Lionel Barrymore, as the husband of Miss Burke, too gentle and kind for his own good; Marie Dressler, whom you'll like, although she is miscast as an aged actress; Madge Evans and Phillips Holmes, in the romantic roles, are praiseworthy.

Lions Await Rose Bowl Battle

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Ruth Stories Ridiculous. Waiver Side Overlooked. Can't Leave Own League. Battles Given Top Rank. High Hopes for Berger. Basketball Needs Space.

The silly season appears to be in full swing in some parts of the baseball world, with the foolish stuff revolving around Babe Ruth. Until Bob Shawkey got the job officially yesterday, the public had been told repeatedly that Ruth would be sent to Newark, N. J., in 1934, to manage the Yankees' International League farm. And now comes Larry MacPhail, the new directing head of the Cincinnati club, to announce that he tried to get the Bambino for the Red managerial post and failed only because Jacob Ruppert, the Yank owner, said "No."

Larry MacPhail

Could anything be more absurd? The fact that baseball law might prove an obstacle to either of those steps appears not to have been taken into consideration at all. Before Ruth could go to Newark or to any other minor league city, it would be necessary for the Yanks to obtain waivers on him from the 15 other major league clubs. And before the Babe could be transferred to Cincinnati or any other National League city the Yankees would have to get the seven other American League clubs to waive on him. Not even an unconditional release can be given to a player without a complete set of major league waivers.

If the Yanks were to ask waivers on Ruth, which, of course, they have no thought of doing, and were willing to let him go at the waiver price, it would cost an American League club only $4,000 to get him. Can you imagine his being passed up by even one of them at any price, despite his having neared the final stages of his playing career. There wouldn't be a chance in the world for MacPhail to get Ruth even if Ruppert were willing. The new Red boss said the other day that he probably knows more about America's chance of retaining the Walker Cup in golf next spring than he knows about the big baseball leagues, and he sure is proving it.

ALL-LITHUANIAN ELEVEN IS LATEST

The latest in "all" football teams is an all-Lithuanian eleven, submitted by Constant P. Starolis, of Esplen, who explains it was picked by a Lithuanian newspaper, the Garsas. The ends are Pilconis, of Temple, and Deanavich, of Wisconsin; tackles, Uzdavenis, of Fordham, and Wistert, of Michigan; guards, Gailus (captain), Ohio State, and A. Kaural, of Northwestern; center, Vuccinich, of Ohio State; quarterback, Pincura, of Ohio State; halfbacks, Purvis, of Purdue, and Sarouskas, of Fordham; fullback, Stancook, of Army.

The following players were given honorable mention: Viskovitch, Georgetown; Krause, Notre Dame; E. Zukas, Temple; Barkaus, Manhattan; Maneikis, Chicago; Ercius, W. & J.; Ezmurt, Boston College, and Mikelonis, Penn State.

BATTLES RATED GREATEST PRO BACK

Cliff Battles, formerly of West Virginia Wesleyan and now of the Boston Redskins, is pronounced by Harry Newman, New York Giant star, to be the greatest running back in the professional ranks and also the hardest to bring down. Newman relates that in one game he tackled Battles and had Cliff's ankles locked against his chest, gripped as hard as he could grip them. "But all that I got for my fine tackle was a split lip," said Newman. "He kicked loose and one of his heels hit me in the mouth, splitting my lip. Battles is the best running back in the league and the hardest back in the country to bring down."

Cliff Battles

Newman names another former star of this district in ranking the best National League players at the various positions. He classes Cal Hubbard, who played at Geneva before going to Green Bay, as the league's greatest tackle. Hewitt, of the Chicago Bears, is named as the best end; Michalske, of Green Bay, as the best guard; Hein, of the Giants, as the best center; Pressnell, of Portsmouth, as the best quarterback; Pinckert, of Boston, or Lumpkin, of Portsmouth, as the best blocking back; Strong, of the Giants, and Manders as the best punters and place kickers, and Nagurski, of the Bears, as the best plunging back.

FUCHS TIPS BERGER TO OUTHIT KLEIN

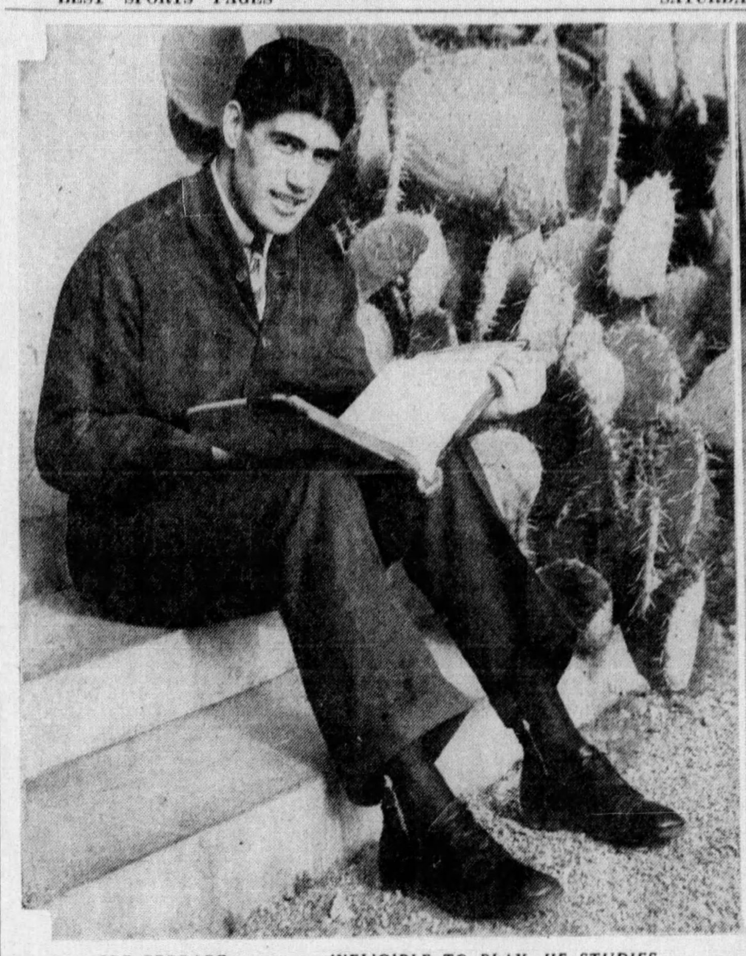
President Emil Fuchs, of the Boston Braves, predicts that Wally Berger will outhit Chuck Klein during the next baseball season. He bases the forecast on Berger's steady improvement and the belief that Klein, now a Cub and playing only 11 instead of 77 games a year in the Phillies' joke park, will miss a lot of the cheap hits he got in past campaigns. As Burt Whitman contends, Berger's average of .313 last season really was better than his .323 in 1931. A less lively ball was in use last season, and whereas 34 National Leaguers batted 300 in 75 or more games in 1931, only 20 did it in 1933.

SMALL GYMS RETARD BASKETBALL IN EAST

In the 42 seasons that have passed since Dr. James Naismith invented basketball in the winter of 1891, the floor sport has grown until it is estimated five million games are now played annually in the United States, and as the present campaign moves along it appears that the Middle West continues to lead the country both in quality of play and attendance figures. But Nat Holman, former professional star and now coach at College of the City of New York, takes the view that the East suffers in attendance comparisons only because its college halls and gyms lack the seating space to accommodate all the fans who would like to witness the big games. We have had evidence of that in Pittsburgh, and Holman says it applies to most other eastern centers.

Nat Holman

According to the veteran, the capacity of the various gyms is found altogether inadequate many times each year when big games are being played, and he says there's no telling what size crowds eastern teams could attract if they only had the space. That's the only thing that holds basketball back in the East, Holman thinks. From his viewpoint, it's one of the most attractive of sports, and he argues that among its many features it's fast, entertaining and easy to understand; thousands of likely spectators have played it and know all the ins and outs; even girls are enthusiastic fans, because many of them have played; the action is compact, close to the spectators, and all of it is visible, the fact that a basketball is so much larger than a hockey puck, a baseball or even a football making it easier for the customers to see what is going on.



JOE FERRARE . . . . . INELIGIBLE TO PLAY, HE STUDIES

Just resting and awaiting the kickoff in the Tournament of Roses football game at Pasadena, Cal., on Monday are these members of the Columbia University squad in Arizona. Cards help to kill the hours and relax taut nerves. Ferrare is the Pittsburgh lad who is co-captain-elect of the Lions for next year and is ineligible scholastically to compete in this post-season classic, but has been taken on the trip nevertheless. He is catching up in his studies to be eligible for play next year. Injuries helped

CORUM AMAZED AT SIZE OF STANFORD

By BILL CORUM
International News Service.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 30.—We have seen that Stanford football squad at last, and Columbia is welcome to it.

Coach Tiny Thornhill's young men are not as big as we've been hearing since the day in November we put forth the first tentative suggestion that the Lions be their opponents in the Rose Bowl. They're bigger. My friends, they are bigger than bad dream after an evening of indulging in Welsh rarebits. They are, in the parlance of Hollywood, collosal.

INDIANS HAVE STUFF

And from Capt. Bill Corbus up and down, back and forth and around again, they also can go to town. They can turn on. They didn't do a great deal at yesterday's workout in Tournament Park, but they did enough to give this pop-eyed observer a couple of sleepless nights between now and Monday.

But we are glad of one thing. We are glad our friend, Lou Little, wasn't along with us to see 'em. Lou is a good worrier, at best. One peep at these guys and we'd have to send back East for Gloomy Gil Dobie to comfort him.

Lou is an honest advertiser. He has a little team. Thornhill calls himself Tiny to lead unsuspecting guys like me astray, and then comes up with the biggest college football team I ever saw in my life.

However, this would be a bad time for me to take down in my support of Columbia. Big as the Indians are, I saw no indications that they couldn't be made to fall when hit.

LIONS NOT BLUFF

Even when he's bluffing in a poker game, a guy must go through once he starts and keep on shoving those chips out there, and there's quite a lot more to this football team from Morningside than bluff. They proved that against an outfit that lined up almost as bulky as Stanford, Syracuse, in their last game of the regular season. Not that Syracuse probably is anything like as good a team as Stanford, but Monday afternoon will tell better about that.

And as Al Barabas, the hard-hitting Austrian of Little's first-string backfield, says of the big fellows:

"The seats of their trousers will get just as hot as a little guy's, if you can keep sitting 'em down on 'em often enough."

Tilden, Richards Near Net Final

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 30—(AP.)—Round-robin play for the national professional indoor tennis championship entered the second day today with William T. Tilden and Vincent Richards, of New York, unbeaten thus far.

Richards, seeded second, scored a well-deserved triumph last night over Bruce Barnes, youthful Texan, in one of the round-robin semi-final matches. The score was 8-6, 6-4, 8-6.

Earlier, Tilden, who is seeded first, downed his former Davis Cup teammate, Francis T. Hunter, of New Rochelle, N. Y., 6-0, 6-3, 6-2.

Wilson in Philly To See Nugent

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Back from a two-months' stay in Florida, Jimmy Wilson, new catcher for the Phillies, was noncommital today about deports that he is to take the managerial reins from Burt Shotton.

Word had gone around that he had cut short his southern trip to discuss plans for the club with President Gerry Nugent. Wilson said:

"Of course I expect to see Nugent, now that I am home. But just when we will get together is hard to say. Right now, my status with the club is that of player."

Dayton, New York Girls Gain Final

BROOKLINE, Mass., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—After shaking off her heavy cold overnight, Virginia Hollinger, 17-year-old Dayton, O., girl gained the final round of the girls' national indoor tennis tournament by brushing aside Louise Harding, of Brookline, favorite contender from the Boston district, by a 6-4, 6-3 margin yesterday at Longwood.

Miss Hollinger collapsed Thursday in her winning quarter-finals match against Helen Grawn, of Gross Point, Mich., the defending champion. She will oppose Millicent Hirsh, of New York, in today's championship play.

British Star Agrees To Meet Gar Wood

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—James R. Ardiel, 20-year-old holder of the British empire outboard motorboat championship, has agreed to drive the proposed Canadian entry in the 1934 Harmsworth trophy race against Gar Wood, it was announced by the backers of the challenge.

Ardiel is one of the leading outboard pilots of the world, having won 102 of 106 races he has contested in since 1929 and twice has won the Lord Wakefield trophy, emblematic of Empire supremacy.

Yellow Jackets Drill for Brewers

Coach Suds Sutherland put his Yellow Jacket lacrosse team, idle from league competition since December 19, through a spirited workout today in preparation for its return to activity against the Milwaukee Brewers, at Motor Square Garden at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

The Brewers, who helped the Jackets introduce the sport here last December 12, gave the locals their best opposition of the season before bowing, 8-5, on the occasion of the inaugural.

ZANESKI LOST TO TEAM FOR FRAY MONDAY

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 30.—Duquesne University's varsity football squad, 34 strong, arrived here this morning after a quick trip from its home baliwick of Pittsburgh, primed for the Festival of the Palms battle Monday with the University of Miami Hurricanes.

Coach Elmer Layden, of the Dukes, who will be directing the Red and Blue for the last time in the game Monday, ordered a workout at Moore Park, scene of Monday's game, for this afternoon, and will put his charges through another drill tomorrow. Layden leaves Duquesne this year to take over the coaching duties at Notre Dame.

The Duquesne party, augmented by more than a score of followers, was met at the station by a reception committee from the Miami Athletic Association and escorted to the team's headquarters at the Alcazar Hotel.

ZANESKI OUT

Ed Zaneski, reserve halfback, was declared definitely out of the game and Anthony Baron, tackle, also may be forced to the sidelines. Zaneski sustained a fracture above the knee in the Geneva game which closed the Duquesne regular season, but it was thought the injury would improve in time for the game in Florida. His status was made definite by Dr. Leo D. O'Donnell as the Dukes stopped at Atlanta for two hours en route yesterday.

Baron was limping slightly from an ankle injury suffered Thursday morning as the Dukes held their final drill on the home campus. The injury, which he failed to report until yesterday, may improve before Monday.

SQUAD IN SHAPE

The remainder of the Duquesne squad was in fine condition and has displayed excellent spirit throughout the long ride on the train. The boys took advantage of every opportunity to get out and run, making sport of their exercise at each brief station stop. In Fairfax, N. C., the majority of the squad, lead by George Rado, gave themselves over to cow-chasing, a pastime which nearly became disastrous when the cows resented taking part in the football team's workout.

Both Coach Tommy McCann and Bob Zuppke, Illinois mentor, who is here helping to get the Hurricanes into shape for their clash with the Dukes, said that the Miami team is in the finest spirits that they have ever seen a local squad. Zuppke gave the boys a long talk before practice yesterday morning and stressed the importance of believing in themselves.

POINTS OUT WEAKNESSES

Zuppke pointed out the two major weaknesses in the Hurricane team, lack of reserves and the open field tackling. He said that due to the few reserves he could not work the boys hard on tackling for fear of losing more by injuries.

He promised Miami football fans a varied offense with plenty of complicated forward passes and spinners, and said that at times they would use the shift and then would go directly into the line.

The players will take another workout today, running signals and working against the Duquesne offensive plays.

COLUMBIA ON EDGE FOR ROSE BOWL BATTLE

SCRAPPY LIONS SET FOR TRIP TO PASADENA

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Trained to the minute and straining at the leash, Columbia's Lion gridsters restlessly awaited today their hour of departure for Pasadena, where they will match their football skill against Stanford New Years Day.

There was a calm tenseness about the eastern squad as it prepared to break camp after a week of intense training under the warm Arizona sun. A short, snappy workout this afternoon was to terminate the stay in this quiet pueblo which boasts of sending great grid teams on to triumph on the coast.

OBSERVERS LIKE LIONS

Close observers who have seen football squads come and go East, South and West through Arizona's wide open spaces, were asking themselves today, as the time to push westward drew near, if perhaps this little group from the sidewalks of New York wasn't cooking up a bad stew for the Indians they meet at the Rose fiesta.

The physical condition of the players was near perfect. The morale was high and there was a distinct local feeling of distrust of the odds against Coach Lou Little's team. In several years Tucson's football followers have not seen as well trained and as finely behaved a squad, at this the favorite watering place of grid travelers from East, South and West.

But with all its great condition, will Coach Little's band of none-too-big gridsters stand up to Stanford's big Red team and survive? Can it still stave off the Indians when the first and second and third team reserves, all strong, alert players, filter into the game? And what about those winter-hardened youths from the Atlantic seaboard holding up for 60 minutes of hard football under a stern Southern California sun?

HANDLE BALL WELL

Those were the questions being asked as the Lions rallied around at the gruff, good-natured commands of Coach Little and packed bag and baggage for the last leg of their transcontinental journey.

Probably the Rose Tournament series in its 18 years never saw a team which could handle the pigskin with such ease and assurance as can this light, fast Columbia aggregation.

The team will leave here at 7:15 p. m. and arrive in Alhambra station near Pasadena at 9 a. m. tomorrow. It will be taken immediately to its hotel on the rim of the Arroyo Seco, only a short punt and pass from the classic Rose Bowl.

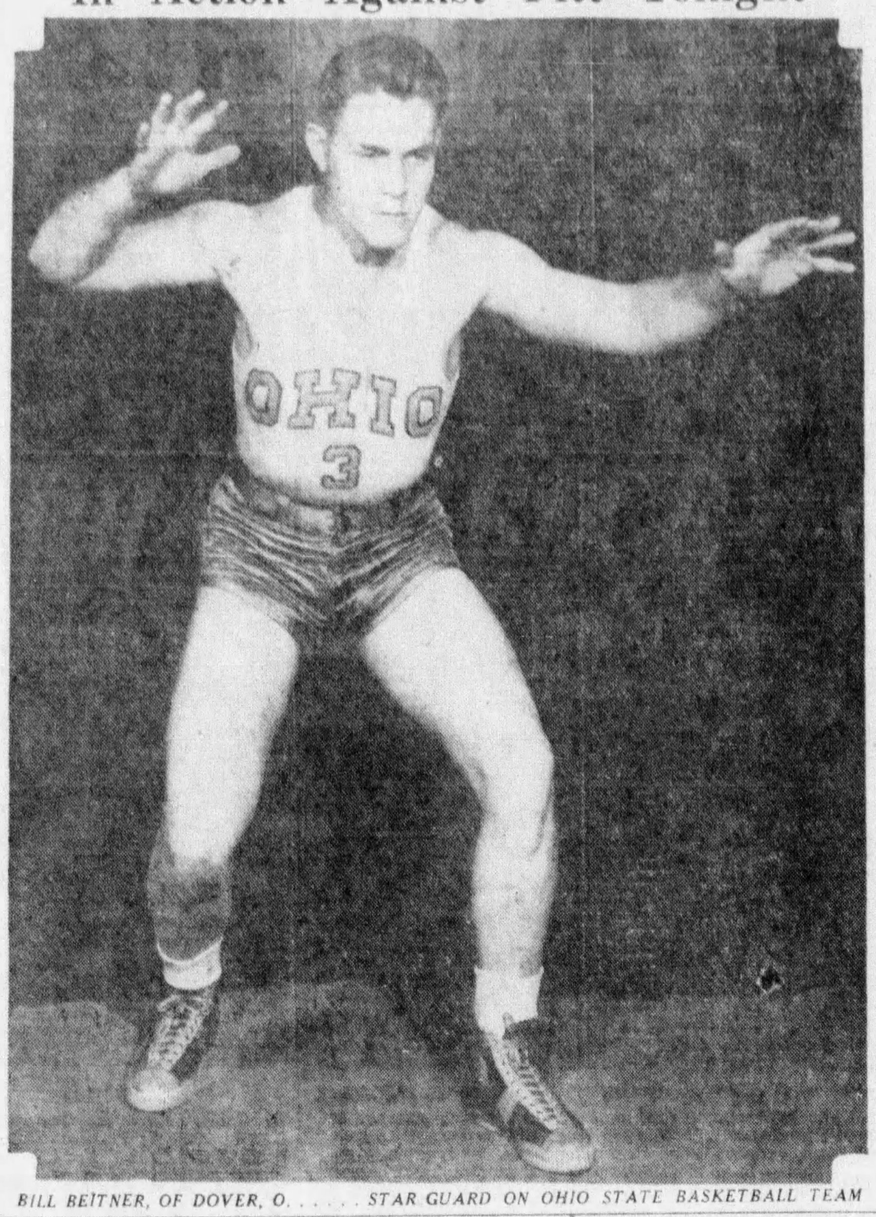
In Action Against Pitt Tonight



BILL BEITNER, OF DOVER, O. . . . . STAR GUARD ON OHIO STATE BASKETBALL TEAM

EAST AND WEST TEAMS SET

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Over the peak of their heavy training routine and with a week's intensive practice behind them, football stars of the East and West tapered off today in final preparations for the annual charity game here New Years Day.

The squads survived several scrimmages, solid defensive blocking sessions and a dose of rainy weather without casualties. A few limps were noticeable and some of the players had colds but all told the injuries and illness were of a minor nature.

Light workouts will be held tomorrow, at which time the respective coaches, Dick Hanley and Andy Kerr, of the East, and Orin Hollingbery and Percy Locey, of the West, plan to announce the starting lineups.

The eleven men who will take the field for the kickoff have just about been decided upon in the West's practice stronghold at the University of California, but Coaches Kerr and Hanley continued to shuffle their players, especially in the backfield.

On the Stanford University training field, late switches among the Eastern behind-the-line performers saw Charley Soleau, of Colgate, take over the quarterback position again. It was indicated Soleau would start at the position because he is better acquainted with the Warner system which the East will play.

Threat of rain in the offing for New Years Day was not alluring to the Eastern mentors.

Wet weather or a soggy field would not handicap the West's backfield operators as much as it would the other side.

CITY LEAGUE FIVES LOSE

Vines to Compete In Milk Fund Event

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30.—(Universal)—Apparently back in his championship form of 1932, Ellsworth Vines concluded training here yesterday for his professional debut against Bill Tilden at Madison Square Garden, New York, on January 10, in a benefit for the free milk fund for babies, of which Mrs. William Randolph Hearst is chairman.

A crowd of several hundred watched the former Wimbledon and United States tennis champion outclass Lester Stoefen and Gene Mako. No score was kept. Vines concentrated on developing a drop-shot, change of pace and a chopstroke, weapons with which he hopes to defeat Tilden.

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

George Gibson expects to motor into town a few days after the Happy New Year, but if the snow continues to pile up between here and his Canadian home, the Pirate pilot may rumble into the city in one of Mr. Pullman's latest models.

Gibby has not been in this neighborhood since the close of last season, but he has been at Forbes Field in spirit even as Jack Frost reigns at the Oakland Orchard. Gibby's mind has been concentrated around the second-base area, in particular, and he doesn't have to go outside to feel a few shivers when he thinks about the keystone sector.

As a last resort George might take a run up to Emlenton and lay hands on a pretty fair second-sacker named Claude Ritchey, but apparently George entertains hopes of luring Billy Herman from the Cubs, or Tony Cuccinello from the Dodgers.

The National League sports a lot of nifty secondsackers, but they are wearing the wrong uniforms from the standpoint of Pirate fans and fanettes. The Critzes, the Maranvilles, the Hermans and Frisches are all doing swell jobs of doubling up Pirate runners. There are those who feel that Tommy Thevenow would fill the keystone bill with efficiency plus, but Gibby fears that Tom could not carry the burden throughout the season.

The Pirate skipper appreciates the importance of dependable fielding around the middle of the diamond. George had a ringside seat for performances of the Wagner-Ritchey show, and he held onto the same seat stubs for the Wagner-Miller act, which was just about as keen as the first named. These setups were prime integrals in winning Pittsburgh pennants.

All of us young fellows who say baseball skill has kept in step with the march of progress will hear the merry "ha-ha" from the old-timers' section when we try to compare any Pirate second-base combination of the past 20 years with the Wagner-Ritchey duet. The Wright-Maranville show of 1924 perhaps was the closest approach to Honus and Claude. The Rabbit appears to have been as clever as Ritchey, but would we say that Missouri Glenn, even with his powerhouse wallops and his hawk-like fielding, was the equal of the Flying Dutchman? If we did say so you probably would not expect anybody to believe us.

A Wagner-Ritchey, Maranville-Evers, Cronin-Myer combination around the middle of the diamond stifles runs before they are in the making, and when you do this your pitchers, if they are even fair-to-middlin', will turn in a lot of shutout and low-run games. Then all you have to do is to go out and get a few runs and the ball game is in the old sack.

The way the roads are now, this important part of the Pirate defense may turn out to be the team's weakest cog. Let us all hope it will not come to pass, but if it does, you may as well take that cash you are holding for world series ducats and buy choice seats for the Southern California-Pitt battle at The Stadium. Yes, sir, the Buccos will have a hard time copping the pennant if those ground balls around second are not gobbled up and turned into double shuffles.

And by the way, while we're spreading cheer, have you concluded that the Pirate pitching staff may mark up another debit, provided the two major leagues adopt a uniform ball that bounces around like a reporter's check? The moguls may compromise on a rocket that will be quite a departure from the one used in the Heydler circuit last season. Fastball pitchers like Dean, Warneke, Bush and Schumacher may not note much difference, but the new ball is apt to be tough on the lads who have only fair stuff and who depend on outguessing the batter.

CENTRAL LOOP TEAMS MEET

By TOM BIRKS

Four games are scheduled in the Central District Soccer League this afternoon. The best game of the day is booked at Beadling, where Union Switch meets the Old Carnegie aggregation. Aliquippa comes to Warrington Park to meet Beltzhoover, Clan Douglas goes to Ambridge to tackle the Bridge Workers and Lawrenceville fans have a local battle to watch when the Rovers and Dunwicks clash at Leslie Park.

The West Penn high commission, in session last night, suspended Dan Vangan, of Old Carnegie, until September 1, 1934. Eddie Aston, of the same team, will be out of the game for eight days. These players were ordered out of the game against Arsenal by Referee Martin.

Four players have been selected to report to the managers of the foreign-born, American-born teams at Greenlee Field Monday in addition to the list already published. They are Clough, of Union Switch, and Smith, of Arsenal, for the foreign-born team, and Stanley Kuten, of Heidelberg, and Joe Suspinsky, of Union Switch, to the American-born squad.

DUNLAP WINS AT PINEHURST

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Giving a strong exhibition of trap play, George T. Dunlap, Jr., national amateur champion, yesterday defeated Dick Wilson, of Southern Pines, 2 and 1, to win the annual Pinehurst mid-winter golf title for the eighth time in the last nine years.

Dunlap was in the traps four times on as many holes at the start of the 18-hole round, but he recovered brilliantly and ended the first nine all square with Wilson, who has challenged his superiority six times in the last 10 years, only to be beaten five out of the six.

Norwin Announces 1934 Grid Card

NORWIN, Pa., Dec. 30.—Three schools have been dropped and eight games have been scheduled by the Norwin High School eleven, class AA, W. P. I. A. L., for 1934.

New Kensington and McKeesport, both class AA schools, and Pitcairn, a class B entry, have been stricken from the card. Under its new schedule Norwin will play Greensburg, Wilkinsburg, Jeannette and Turtle Creek Union, the required number of class AA teams, while the other four games will include two class A schools and two in class B. The schedule follows:

September 22, East McKeesport, at home; 29, Kewickley Township, at home; October 6, Wilkinsburg, at home; 12, Scott High, Braddock, away; 20, Greensburg, at home; 27, Scottdale, at home; November 3, Jeannette, away; 10, temporarily open; 17, Turtle Creek Union, away.

Pitt's puzzling basketball varsity goes champion baiting tonight. The Panthers, with three victories and two defeats to show for its efforts to date, meets the formidable Ohio State quintet in the Stadium Pavilion. Ohio State won the Western Conference title last campaign and, save for one player, has its 1932-33 squad intact.

The fact that the Buckeyes have lost five consecutive floor tussles to the Panthers means little as far as tonight's game is concerned, other than that it probably will add ginger to the Buckeye attack. The Panthers have shown little, even in victory, this season, and unless they take a decisive turn for the better tonight, the good Dr. Carlson, their coach, may as well dust off his worried look and prepare to keep wearing it for some time to come.

LINEUP SHIFTS DELAYED

The proposed shifts in the Pitt lineup again have been delayed and the same five that started against Minnesota will go to bat against the Bucks. It is likely, however, that Ted Roderick, the lad who sparked the Panthers to victory over the Gophers, will break into the action earlier than he did against Minnesota.

Carlson turned the Panthers over to his assistant, Dr. George Kowallis, after the Minnesota game and hied him to Chicago, where he attended the convention of the N. C. A. A. Dr. George put the old pressure on the two days he had 'em under his wing.

Ohio State will send a veteran array into the battle, with Colburn and Wilson, two brilliant performers, in at the forwards, Conrad at center and Fisher and Beitner at the guards.

DUKES HAVE WALKAWAY

The Dukes had better be getting some major league opposition pretty quick or they may forget how to handle same when it does appear. Chick Davies' city champions bumped off their third setup of the season last night on the Bluff court, trimming Adrian College, of Michigan, 49 to 17.

At no time were the visitors in the ball game. They were limited to five field goals for the evening, while the Dukes rang up 22. The Dukes had 'em, 28 to 8, at the half and, had Coach Davies so elected, and kept his varsity in the action, the count might have been plenty higher.

Paul Birch and Jim MacDougal, who have been on the hospital list since the season opened, were given workouts and both came through with points. The Duquesne scoring was led by Art Feldman, who bagged five field goals and a foul for 11 points. Murphy had five baskets for 10.

Woerner, Adrian center, scored more than half of his team's points, with two field goals and five fouls. The lineup:

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Combatants of the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association loop once more monopolize the inter-club sport scene today with a complete program of hostilities as their City Handball League brethren remain idle another week in holiday respite due to terminate next Saturday.

This afternoon will find P. A. A. teams striving to retain slender leads in both divisions of the squash circuit. Dr. Dave O'Loughlin and his class A contenders, in entertaining Allegheny Country Club, appear to boast better chance of staying out front than does Karl Wolfe's class B combine, which must journey down the Ohio for battle with a formidable Edgeworth force. The Winged Head topflighters have already registered 4-1 victory over Allegheny in a fray in the Sewickley bailiwick and should scarcely do worse than this on their own courts.

Edgeworth, with King Moore, Don Mattern, Bill Boggs, and Owen Odell ready for action, is pretty certain to push the P. A. A. secondaries aplenty, unless Capt. Wolfe can round up Dr. John O'Loughlin to supplement his crew.

Meanwhile at the Keystone Club, McCook Reed and his K. A. C. No. 1 host will strive to repel Joe Oliver, Joe Holmes, Jr., Jim Ebbert and the rest of the champion Pittsburgh Golf Club squad. The Keystone class B outfit should improve its average and very possibly its standing through a visit to the Northumberland domain of the rather weak Pittsburgh Golf Club seconds.

AWARD VOTED CUNNINGHAM

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Glen Cunningham, fleet middle distance runner of the University of Kansas, has been adjudged the winner of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Medal for 1933.

Cunningham won out by the margin of a single vote over Bill Bonthron, Princeton track ace, in the closest race in the history of the award, given annually to the amateur athlete who by his example and influence has done most during the year to advance the cause of sportsmanship.

Six hundred outstanding leaders in the world of sport, representing all sections of the country, comprised the tribunal for the award and gave Cunningham a total of 611 votes against 610 for Bonthron, who forced Jack Lovelock, of New Zealand, to a new one-mile record in a sensational race at Princeton last summer.

In third place, far behind the leaders, was Alfred Jochim, of New York, famous gymnast. Pat McDonald, veteran weight tosser, was fourth.

LENORE KIGHT TIES RECORD

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Five national swimming records were swept into the discard yesterday for a total of nine, and a mark established in a previously unrecorded distance, in the first two days of the Olympic stars' meet in the Miami-Biltmore pools.

Leonard Spence, New York Athletic Club breast stroke ace, was in the lead with three national records for the cumulative score, with Anne Govednik, of Chisholm, Minn.; Alice Bridges, of Whitinsville, Mass., and Lenore Kight, of Homestead, Pa., trailing him with two each.

Miss Govednik and Miss Bridges garnered one each yesterday to add to their singles of Thursday. Ralph Flanagan, of the Biltmore, home team, captured the only other record broken in yesterday's competition.

LENORE TIES MARK

Miss Kight had to content herself yesterday with equaling her own record of 3:38 2-5 for the 300-yard free style short course. She smashed two national marks Thursday.

Spence's victories came over the 500-meter short course route, cracking the previous mark of 8 minutes flat by 12 4-5 seconds. He was clocked at the 500-yard line in his meter swim for a time of 7:04 flat. The previous time for the distance was 7:18 3-5. Both records were established by Nelson Millard at New Haven in 1930.

Miss Govednik was timed at 2:58 1-5 seconds to better the previous 200-yard breast-stroke mark by 9 1-5 seconds. The former time was covered in 1932 by Katherine Rawls, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., at Newburg, N. Y.

FLANAGAN SETS RECORD

The fifth national record of the day came when Miss Bridges thrashed the 50-yard back-stroke distance in 33 1-5, supplanting the previous mark of :35 3-5, set by the late Sybil Bauer at night in 1923.

Parker Beats Madden To Gain Semi-Finals

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Frankie Parker, the 17-year-old Milwaukee tennis flash, continued on his sensational way to the national indoor junior tennis championship when he swept into the semi-final round by virtue of another straight-set victory in the quarter-finals at the Seventh Regiment Armory courts yesterday.

Allowing his quarter-final round opponent, Robert Madden, of Pittsburgh, only six points in the opening set, and reeling off a series of aces, Parker made short work of the eighth seeded player to win, 6-1, 6-2.

Gilbert A. Hunt, Jr., of Massachusetts Tech, defeated George H. Ball, of El Paso, Tex., and Northwestern University seeded fourth, 6-1, 6-2, and today meets Joseph L. Abrams, of New York.

KING LEVINSKY EASY VICTOR; NEUSEL COPS

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Don Dinnie McCorkindale, who came all the way from South Africa to pursue his boxing career, brought plenty of courage with him, but apparently little else with which to cope with such American heavyweights as King Levinsky, Chicago's celebrated former fish peddler.

McCorkindale gave a convincing demonstration of his ability to sop up punishment last night against Levinsky in the Chicago Stadium. He got plenty of beating from the King, who won the unanimous decision of referee and judges.

DOWN SEVEN TIMES

At no time did the South African heavy, who knocked out Larry Gains, the Toronto Negro, who defeated Primo Carnera, before the latter won the heavyweight championship of the world, do anything the least bit dangerous. Levinsky knocked him down seven times, four times in the first round and once each in the fourth, eighth and tenth frames, but couldn't keep him down.

Unlike American fighters who take nine-counts when hurt, McCorkindale bounced up as soon as he could regain his feet. The longest he remained on the floor was for a count of three, the fourth time he went down in the opening round.

NEUSEL BEATS IMP

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Walter Neusel, blond young heavyweight from Germany, pelted Ray Impellittiere, a giant who outweighed him over 50 pounds, all over the Garden battle pit last night to win an easy 10-round decision before a crowd that was about as low grade as the milling, 4,000.

Neusel, blond and eager and a walloper, fresh from two knockouts in his American small club debut, tried his best to make a fight of it, but Impellittiere, for all his 246 pounds and 6 feet 7 inches of height, ran most of the time.

There were no knockdowns and all the fighting was contributed by the tow-headed, headlong German who looked like a small boy beside the huge, baby-faced fellow who made such a fine showing in losing a decision recently to Tommy Loughran after the referee awarded him a technical knockout in the sixth round, but was overruled by New York state commissioners.

Neusel threw himself headlong on the giant at the opening gong and never stopped heaving leather while Impellittiere held and ran and clinched and leaned until the crowd, disgusted at the sight of the cowering big man booed disdainfully.

CORNELL RIDERS FACE LOCALS

Spirited action is in prospect on the Hunt Armory tanbark tonight as the 107th Field Artillery Polo Association riders tackle the Cornell University poloists.

The local trio, undefeated in intersectional competition, will find rugged opposition in the visitors' lineup. Southpaw Jimmy Lawrence, despite the fact that he is tonight making his bow with the Ithacans, may develop into a source of considerable trouble for the Gunners, who have yet to stack up against a portsider.

The visitors will rely on Capt. D. S. Stevenson to man their big offensive weapons, with C. L. Ranney, a California rancher, defending the uprights.

Striving to maintain the city's clean slate against foreign invaders, Coach Paul Mazuzan again has scrambled his available resources, with the result that two new faces will be seen in the Artillery Association's lineup tonight. They are Lieut. Morris Linton and Bill Jones. Mazuzan will pilot the team at No. 2. The starting lineup:

STOCK MARKET MAKES QUIET ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Stocks progressed quietly upward today. Metals were in good demand while alcohols and tobaccos also improved substantially. A liberal sprinkling of cash sales for year-end tax purposes still appeared on the ticker tape.

United States Smelting advanced more than 3 points. Issues up 1 to around 2 included McIntyre, Dome, Cerro de Pasco, Homestake Mining, American Commercial Alcohol, National Distillers, United States Industrial Alcohol, American Tobacco B, Johns-Manville and Liggett & Myers B. Fractional improvement was shown by United States Steel, American Telephone, Allied Chemical, Santa Fe and General Motors. Auburn and Owens-Illinois were slightly reactionary.

With the Treasury closed for the holiday, there was, consequently, no change in the domestic gold price of $34.06 an ounce. The dollar, however, developed weakness in early foreign exchange dealings. The British pound recovered 5⅛ cents at $5.12⅜ and the French franc moved up .07½ of a cent to 6.16 cents.

While exchange rates still occupied an important niche in the speculative structure, much interest was expressed in signs of further business and industrial improvement. Such statistical evidence as the freight car loadings report for the week ended December 23, was viewed as highly encouraging.

Total loadings for that week, while under the figure for the immediate previous period, still showed a gain of 6½ per cent over the 1932 week. The decline from the preceding week, it was pointed out, was much less than seasonal.

In line with the traffic indicator, announcement of a loan of 77 million dollars by the Public Works Administration to the Pennsylvania Railroad was viewed by most carrier observers as a constructive straw in the wind. Of cheer to the transportation group also was Secretary Ickes statement that the loan to the Pennsylvania was largely for wages and materials, and that similar contracts with other lines totalling $126,342,000 were being speeded "so that the combined regenerative effect will contribute to recovery in 1934."

WHEAT SHOWS RISING TREND

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—An upward trend showed itself in grain prices early today. Purchasing of wheat was based a good deal on opinions of trade leaders that general bearishness was hardly warranted by market conditions, and that a recovery from recent declines was due. Opening unchanged to ½ cent higher, wheat afterward rose all around. Corn started at ¼-¾ gain, and subsequently climbed further.

LONDON GOLD PRICE RISES

LONDON, Dec. 30.—(INS.)—The international gold price was raised four-pence (about eight cents) today to 126 shillings six-pence per ounce, with a premium of 3½ pence over the French rate.

This was equal to about $32.13 in American currency at today's opening exchange rate of $5.08½.

There was no announcement on the R. F. C. price for newly-mined gold from Washington today, as the Treasury was closed. Yesterday's price, which had been in effect for nine days, was $34.06 an ounce.

P. R. R. OBTAINS BIG LOAN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(INS.)—The PWA late yesterday signed contracts with the Pennsylvania Railroad providing for a loan to the company of 77 million dollars for finishing electrification between Philadelphia and Washington, the building of 7,000 new freight cars and electric locomotives.

The road stated that some of the work for which it planned to borrow will be financed otherwise while still other work will be deferred temporarily.

YEAR'S STEEL OUTPUT UP 70 P. C.

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots in this five-day week was officially forecast at 31.6 per cent of capacity, the highest rate since last October barring last week, when the figure was 34.2 per cent.

The decrease does not indicate a decrease in finished steel production, as mills have been liquidating stocks of ingots and semi-finished steel. Shipments of finished steel have exceeded production on account of the code requirement that contract shipments be completed by December 31, and sometimes steel is held back until the full order can be shipped at once.

Shipments of finished steel have been at about 20 per cent higher rate this month than in November, when a decrease of around 10 per cent would be in keeping with seasonal trend. The interesting question of late has been the relative importance of three influences in causing this divergence: First, the taking of steel by customers in advance of its being needed on account of price; second, further depletion of stocks of steel and manufactures of steel accumulated during the phenomenal bulge last summer; third, improvement in consuming trades.

There has been a tendency to overrate the first influence because it is so easy thus to explain so unusual a swing in the production rate. Except in the case of material going into identified construction jobs, shipments on contracts must be completed by December 31, except that the producer may cancel unshipped tonnage for "a fair consideration."

JANUARY PROSPECTS

The cases involved do not count up a large tonnage, but they do represent a subtraction or borrowing from January business, and in this respect January would lose, compared with December, double the tonnage involved. The other two influences should continue and grow, while there will also be the usual favorable seasonal influence. A lull of two or three weeks is more or less expected, but January has a fair chance of doing as well in ingot output as December. For the two months following there should be substantial increases.

Demand by the automobile industry will not be felt strongly until February. The industry stocked a good bit of steel prior to November and outside of Ford has been so delayed in getting into quantity production with the new models that the stocks, laid in to take advantage of expiring prices, will last well through next month, but even in January the industry will take more steel than the limited amounts it received in November or this month.

Railroad inquiry has grown relatively heavy in the last fortnight, in connection with prospective repairs to rolling stock and the building of equipment. The first substantial interest in locomotive boiler tubes has developed. Thus far there has been little buying. Mills may begin feeling this influence by February 1, while there will also be some rail production. The local mill will roll some rails next month for its two affiliated roads, the Union and Bessemer, and for an eastern line.

NEW USES DEVELOPED

During the last two months movement of oil country tubular goods has increased slightly, remaining of small proportions, but surveys made in the last fortnight indicate that there will be much wildcatting next year. Standard pipe has run a little ahead of last month when almost invariably it has done the reverse, so that further gains are indicated.

Production of steel ingots in the year can be estimated with a fair degree of closeness at the round figure of 23,000,000 gross tons, fully 70 per cent above production last year, despite this year's handicaps of running 30 per cent behind a year previous in its first three months and of having two less working days.

The distribution of the steel made was quite unusual. In the very active seven-year period through 1929 four large lines, automobile, building, railroads and oil and gas, accounted for fully three-fifths of all the steel made, leaving a shade less than two-fifths for everything else. It is liberal to estimate that the four lines mentioned absorbed as much as one-third of the steel made this year, which means that the miscellaneous lines took nearly if not quite as much actual tonnage in 1933 as they did in the seven-year active period, when production of steel averaged just double that of this year. The explanation is that many new lines of consumption, individually small, have developed.

BUILDING GAIN SIGNIFICANT

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(AP.)—Construction contracts for the first three weeks of December in 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains, as compiled by F. W. Dodge Corporation, total almost three times as much as the contracts of the same period of 1932—$174,114,500, against $59,352,200.

Residential contracts for the period, December 1 to 22, inclusive, totaled $21,657,200, against $9,469,600 for the comparable period of last year. L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician of the Dodge Corporation, said:

There are no Dodge reports from west of the Rocky Mountains. To arrive at approximate totals for the whole country 12 per cent is added to the volume for the 37 states east of the Rockies. This would bring the approximate total for all classes of construction in the first three weeks of December to $195,008,240.

WAR ON SLUMP THROUGH '33 REVIEWED

By LEWIS HANEY.
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The year 1933 began with a downward reaction in business. This followed the first 1932 spurt in anticipation of inflation, when the Glass-Steagall bill had reduced the security of our currency and "open market operations" had been iniated on a large scale.

This reaction ended last March with a general bank suspension, which followed the banking moratorium in Michigan and Maryland.

Many will always believe that if the sound banks had been allowed to stay open and to resort to clearing house loan certificates, liquidation would have soon been completed and confidence restored.

This we will never know, for the government stepped in and took charge.

For a time it seemed that insolvent banks would be closed and frozen loans be liquidated. But our leaders felt unable to go through so drastic a process, and so we took the road toward government control, public debt and inflation.

MONEY STANDARD GOES

The first steps were the abandonment of the gold standard, the Thomas inflation measures, and the repudiation of gold clauses in bonds. These at once deprived us of any legal monetary standard.

The next steps were the government control of business through the AAA, NRA measures and the PWA.

A great fear of the dollar resulted, and this, together with the anticipation of high costs under NRA codes, caused a wave of speculative buying. Business activity shot up from about 52 per cent of normal in March to about 76 per cent in July. The inevitable reaction carried it down to 64 per cent in November.

The economic history of 1933 is one of government policies. The key is found in the mixture of measures for relief, stimulation and reform.

'SOCIALIZING' STEPS

The outstanding events of the year have been monetary. Besides going off the gold standard, and authorizing the President to inflate our currency, we have resorted to unparalleled "open market operations" designed to inflate bank credit, and to policies of government purchase of gold and silver.

Incidentally, the government has forced the basks into deposit insurance and, by subscribing to their capital stock, has taken a step toward "socializing" banking.

Measures designed for "relief" have been numerous. First came the CCC to provide for 250,000, and then the CWA to care for four million.

The AAA has been used as a means of making vast distributions of government funds among farmers, and the farm loan banks and other farm credit agencies greatly increased their loans toward the end of the year.

The PWA may be considered partly as a "relief" measure, and much of its three billions of dollars has been diverted to expenditures which would not ordinarily be called "public works."

Other prominent relief measures are purchases of food stuffs, and moratoria on debt payments. To the extent that NRA codes spread work among more employes, they are for "relief."

FEWER IN WANT

But "stimulants" have also been administered. Inflationary measures may be so considered, being calculated to cause rising prices.

The NRA was designed partly to "create purchasing power" by putting more people on payrolls. PWA and loans to railways for rails and equipment are chiefly designed to stimulate industrial activity and "put money into circulation."

One result of the relief and stimulant activities was the most rapid increase in the public debt ever seen in peace times.

REFORM ASPECTS

Finally, the development of social "reforms" is a separate aspect. Here comes the securities act and banking legislation. Reforms in stock exchange practices were under active consideration, and legislation seemed probable, despite some "voluntary" steps taken by the exchange.

One phase of NRA is its aim to reform competitive conditions, child labor, etc. In general, the various moves toward "collectivism" and "special-control" of business and finance are considered by administration leaders as social reforms.

The year 1933 has been completely dominated by President Roosevelt. And judging by his utterances, the dominant ideas in his mind are "the forgotten man," "social justice," "a more abundant life for all," guaranteed by government, raising prices to the 1926 level, and a readiness to try experiments.

FAVORABLE ENDING

Probably there has never been a year more completely filled with business uncertainty than was 1933.

Torn from its gold mooring, the dollar fluctuated wildly, making most business plans and investments impossible. NRA codes, processing taxes, the securities act, etc., added to the difficulties in this respect.

There were times when men even had doubts as to the validity of property and contract rights under the Constitution.

The year has ended, however, with the ship of state on a fairly even keel, and "business" expanding after the July-November slump. Many millions of government money are being distributed among the people, for Uncle Sam has made the nation's business his business.

Have You the Room I Want?

I am a stranger in Pittsburgh. I just arrived. Many are coming "in" NOW. I want to be near my work, but in a pleasant location, I want a homelike room with nice people. I am only one of hundreds of young men that want the same.

I do not know your street names so I shop up and down the Sun-Telegraph "To Rent—Rooms" advertisements — not up and down the street for signs. You probably have just the room I am looking for. Won't you help me to find your room by advertising it in the "To Rent—Room" want ads of the Sun-Telegraph? Phone GRant 5400.

Campbell gathered the bridle, glanced gloomily at the bony nag they were abandoning, and which now was browsing on tender April bushes. Then he looked around at the girl and noticed a hole in her left sleeve.

She nodded.

"Chasing Gailliard and Chancellor?"

"Yes. They stopped at Mrs. Butler's house on the Bodyton road. I had news of them there, and took the short cut by the mill on the Vaughan road, near Hatcher's Run, to head them. They didn't go west; they went back to Fitzhugh Lee, and his vedettes took a shot at me."

"You got plenty of grit, young lady, trying to stop two desperate devils like that. Well, that's your reputation in the army, ma'am. Shall we be starting?"

She fished a bacon sandwich out of her haversack and passed it across to him; produced another for herself. They turned their horses, eating as they rode. The deserted nag looked after them until they disappeared in the woods.

Noticing his Confederate uniform, she asked him if he were a "Jessie Scout," but he shook his head: "None o' those hangman's pets for me, ma'am."

"Don't we all belong to the hangman's brood?" she remark carelessly.

"God—I guess we do at that."

On the Vaughan road Sheridan's disguised scout bade the girl a hearty good-by, swallowed the applecore and spurred away in quest of his fiery master, whose misunderstanding with brave, noisy Gen. Warren was beginning to puzzle and irritate him.

News of Her Own

Operator 13, slim and straight and supple as an academy cadet in her saddle, tightened her check strap, set her cap firmly on her short, curly hair, put her horse to a gallop and pounded away on the plank road toward general headquarters, near which Col. Sharpe's secret service division was sure to be found.

One thing she had not told Campbell—the Confederate lines around Petersburg had not only already given way, but Lee's army was leaving. She knew it for a certainty because she had robbed a Confederate courier, and his dispatches to Joe Johnston were in her pocket to prove it.

Toward evening, in pouring rain, vedettes around Gravelly Run stopped her, held her a few moments; then let her through, grining wetly. The whole region was blue with Union cavalry arriving.

She began to talk excitedly to Col. Sharpe the moment she was admitted to his tent. "I've had such good luck," she said breathlessly; "I was taking Campbell's horse to him as you directed me and at 3 o'clock this morning a rebel courier's horse fell dead where the road from Sidney's meets the White Oak road, and here are his dispatches, sir."

"Whose dispatches?" inquired Col. Sharpe, smiling.

"Oh, did you shoot him?"

"Yes, sir. He caught my horse by the head——"

"It isn't quite clear to me yet, ma'am."

"Well, I saw a dead horse on the crossroad; and this man suddenly came up to me in the dark and took hold of my led horse. So I shot him in the legs."

"Oh, I understand," said Sharpe. He opened the dispatches. They were not in Confederate cipher — which would have made no difference except in time, because the Federal military-telegraph cipher operators deciphered every Confederate message. "Sit down, ma'am," he murmured.

Col. Sharpe wrote rapidly and sent the message by orderly to the lieutenant-general in supreme command of all the armies of the United States, who, not very far away, was talking to Gen. Meade.

Then Col. Sharpe turned to Operator 13. "So you made contact with Campbell?"

"Yes, sir."

"To Gen. Sheridan."

"Did he see Gailliard?"

Questions

"Yes, sir. He means to shoot Capt. Gailliard and Vespasian Chancellor, but couldn't find them far enough away to give him a chance to escape."

"Did they get through to the westward?"

"No, sir."

"You attended to that?"

"I tried to."

"Well, they'll be back to try it again," he said, "unless Sheridan's cavalry stops the roads. That's why Lee sent them—to find him a clear road to Joe Johnston and Kirby Smith. I'll stop over to see Gen. Grant. You'd better go to bed."

She slept poorly—was almost ill about midnight; reaction, perhaps, from being fired upon by Fitzhugh Lee's vedettes; for she really had been badly frightened by the fusillade.

Also, her nearness to John Gailliard was making her extremely nervous; and what Campbell had said to her had scared her. Besides, her shooting of the Confederate courier had terribly upset her—the poor, crippled devil scrabbling in the mud beside his dead horse, moaning while she ripped his packet open and pulled out his dispatches. Two of Mrs. Butler's Negroes went to bring him in; but the affair made her sick all the same.

She was deathly sick of war. All the glittering drama of it, all the exciting mystery, had vanished. There remained only hunger, dirt, vermin, bestial violence, the horror of bloody, dying things.

A New Assignment

Something else had come into her mind and heart, also; the first ghostly stirring of spiritual wistfulness and need. Although, in her timid mind, the words and face of God continued to be confused with the words and visage of the President.

Reveille left her still asleep. The roar of cannon shaking her tent aroused her. Col. Sharpe had sent her some good coffee, eggs, soft bread and an orange. The headquarters laundress, black as ebony and weighing 300, gave her a bath and a scrubbing.

Sharpe sent for her about noon.

Gen. Grant was there, his hands shoved deep in his pockets; a short, square, icy-eyed man smoking a cigar.

The lieutenant-general of all the armies of the United States was briefly, silently polite.

"Gen. Grant wishes you to go to Gen. Custer's command," said Col. Sharpe. "You will take as many orderlies and scouts as you desire. The object is to keep any and all rebel couriers from slipping around to the westward while cavalry fighting is going on. Gen. Sheridan has asked for you. You know this net-work of byroads and trails along the Appomattox. Our maps don't show them all, but you have scouted them during the autumn and winter, and I suppose you know every one of them. Don't you?"

"Yes colonel."

"Also you know, personally the two rebel spies we are extremely afraid of. I mean Capt. John Gailliard and Vespasian Chancellor."

"I do sir."

Human Targets

He lifted his stiff-brimmed campaign hat to her, resumed his cigar and walked slowly away, followed by Col. Sharpe.

Since she had been awakened by the guns, carbine firing also had been audible far away to the westward. Now, as an orderly brought around her horse the noise of the rather ragged fusillade had increased. It sounded to her like Spencer carbine fire and the scout, Babcock, who came cantering up on his celebrated horse, Gimlet, said it was Sheridan's cavalry carbines making all that racket.

"It's going to be a fight or a foot race," he said gayly. "God help them; if they run they're done for."

The weather was still lowering, with brief gusts of rain.

Babcock rode with her a little way along the White Oak road. But that was no place for them, they were shot at; and they whirled their horses and ran them hard through the woods to the Dinwiddie road, and then westward all the way to Mrs. Gillian's house. Here the fields, meadows, thickets and woods swarmed with dismounted Union cavalry deploying to the northward. Their yellow-welted jackets made a moving tide of blue spreading over the wet, brown world; the rattle of their Spencer carbines was incessant.

Girl Reports

Babcock galloped over to join a knot of Col. Sharpe's scouts and couriers. Boyish Gen. Merritt and his staff, mounted, were out in the cleared land near a brook, and Operator 13 rode over to report her presence and mission, and to ask for Gen. Custer.

"Gen. Custer," he said, "is facing the rebel cavalry of W. H. F. Lee, Pegram's guns, and the infantry of Corse and Mayo along the White Oak road. It's rather desperate for us unless Warren's 5th Corps moves up."

"They are under orders, sir. Shall I go to Gen. Custer at once, or wait?"

"You'd better go, ma'am, and explain about the importance of stopping any rebel attempt to rush through. Say that I understand it thoroughly. I'll send Campbell as liaison."

"Very well, sir."

Merritt returned her quaint salute with smiling elegance, and she cantered forward into the woods, where she could see the red-and-white in line of battle.

Before trying to snip away hangnails, soak the hands in warm soap suds and scour the cuticle about the nail with a hand brush. Dry, apply olive oil to further soften the flesh, lift the cuticle with the orange wood stick, snip away rag-tags with the curved scissors.

Do you know that short, thick toes denote lack of imagination? Imagine that. Long toes and long feet are suppose to indicate temperament and artistic gifts. High arches are considered evidence of an aristocratic tendency. Well! Well! Now you know all about it.

REVIVAL OF CLASSIC ART IN ITALY . . . THE GLORIOUS RENAISSANCE

Renaissance—revival of Classic Art of Imperial Rome—was brought about by study of the classic remains in Italy in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

Renaissance style in architecture uses—as Romans did—Greek structural elements as ornament in form of engaged columns, decorative gables, etc. Its periods: Early (fifteenth century), preparation; High (greater part of sixteenth century), perfection; Late (Rococo, baroque, second half of sixteenth), decline, imitation.

MICHELANGELO'S MOSES

Michelangelo (1475-1564), sculptor, painter, architect, enriched art with hitherto undreamed of power, grandeur.

MONA LISA

CELLINI'S PERSEUS

Tintoretto (1518—1594) was one of the most gifted and productive painters. Presentation of subject and the masterly application of light, shade is great.

RAPHAEL'S "MADONNA OF THE CHAIR"

"TRIBUTE MONEY," BY TITIAN

Names Will Never Hurt Me

Many names have been called in the heat of a campaign. But we realized the candidates didn't know what they were talking about.

After election they shook hands, the winner forgave the loser and the loser promised to stay within the party until the jobs were handed out.

But the season of 1933 seemed to have changed all that. The political sea lions are barking all over the lot. They're throwing oral sticks and broadcasting stones.

"I resign in a body," screamed Mr. Dubbers, "I shall not condone a policy contrary to the doctrines of George Washington, Andrew Jackson and others too prominent to mention."

"Mr. Dubbers is nuts," retorted Senator Laxx, "He never got a prize for knowing too much. He once got a cup. But he stole it off a pumphandle."

"Dubbers and Laxx don't know enough to pour soup out of a kettle," yelled Commissioner Headlunk. "I was on good terms with all my fellow members. The reason I quit was because I was asked to. It's all a bunch of salami."

"I ain't hooked up in the back or in the front with the bankers," was Congressman Marginmore's answer, "but I cannot stand idly by and see the nation ruined by the opposing party. That's our job. And we intend to get it."

"I can find no word to describe Marginmore," said Mr. Offagain, "but this string around my finger reminds me that my wife sent me to the grocery store for 200 pounds of bologna."

"Give a clown enough putty and he will make himself a funny looking nose," hollered Senator Laxx. "They must either save the nation my way or we will both sink together. We've got to stop picking our leaders out of a hat. I shall wait until I hear my country calling me. Like Cincinnatus at the plow I await the word."

"The word is bologna," remarks Mr. Offagain. And the fight is on. The puzzling feature about all the billingsgate is that nobody is running for office. They're limping from it.

After this we will make the campaigns longer so the boys will not have to do any home work.

A Disappointing Grant

The Flood Control Fiasco May Be Attributable to Business Leaders' Inaction

The Public Works Administration announces that it has granted three million dollars for the construction of a reservoir on the Tygart River in West Virginia to protect the Monongahela valley from flood. The smallness of the grant is disappointing, for fifty million dollars is needed to carry out the flood control program prepared after many years of study by the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh.

The disappointment is made keener by the fact that when the project was laid before the PWA it was praised as just the very kind of public work that it was desired to promote. Another thing that makes for bitterness is that while we are granted a beggarly three million an allotment of $22,590,000 is made for a flood protection project in the Muskingum valley in Ohio.

After holding out every encouragement to believe that the Pittsburgh flood control program would be adopted with little or no change, the PWA suggested that Pittsburgh and the other communities most benefited should share the expense. On being told we were in no financial condition to do so, the administration apparently soured on the project.

The fiasco may be attributed, however, according to observers in Washington who are closely in touch with what is going on, to the inaction of Pittsburgh's business leaders. Mayor John S. Herron did his part. He conferred with public officials and civic leaders within a hundred-mile radius and formed the Tri-State Authority to push the project. But others to whom we had a right to look for support failed us.

The commercial interests that would profit most by flood control neglected the opportunity to obtain an improvement for which the community has been working since the disastrous flood of 1907. And political leaders who might have been expected to use their influence at Washington effectively made a gesture of approval of the flood program, and let it go at that. The persistent drive which we needed was lacking.

Of course, the PWA still has left about 147 million dollars of the three billion, three hundred millions that Congress authorized it to spend, and there is a bare possibility that additional flood control reservoirs may be financed out of the remaining allotments, to be announced next week. But the outlook is far from encouraging.

Indeed there is no assurance that Pittsburgh or Allegheny County will get anything from the PWA. The County Commissioners have been figuring on a thirty-one million dollar grant to finance the construction of some toll bridges, a lake in the North Park, and other improvements. The Allegheny County Authority, a private corporation, was formed at the suggestion of the PWA to handle the jobs; but the money has yet to be procured.

There is, accordingly, good reason for County Commissioner C. C. McGovern's request to Joseph C. Trees, a member of the State Advisory Board on Public Works, that he lead a strong delegation to Washington next week to press for action on the county's application. The PWA needs to be shown that Allegheny County is an important part of the United States, having more population than any of 16 different states, and is entitled to consideration.

In respect to certain kinds of PWA work we have ourselves largely to blame for our failure to receive funds. For example, 150 million dollars have been allocated for municipal projects and housing programs. Thanks to the refusal of the Legislature to enact enabling legislation, Pittsburgh has not received slum clearance money.

The Commonwealth, too, has not been as energetic as it should have been in utilizing federal aid. In an article on the Public Works Administration in the December number of the magazine, State Government, Pennsylvania is listed among "the laggard states." "To date," the writer says, "all but six states—Maryland, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Indiana and New Jersey—have begun actual construction of roads with the funds allotted by the federal government."

We have been slow, too, in availing ourselves of the grand opportunity offered by the Civil Works Administration. Other cities had thousands of men at work while the CWA was waiting for Allegheny County and local municipalities to submit projects. For the improvement that has occurred lately Congressman Henry Ellenbogen deserves much of the credit. He has been indefatigable in securing funds for all sorts of projects.

Congressman Ellenbogen has exerted himself not only to obtain public improvements, such as the completion of the Pitt Cathedral of Learning, but to provide jobs for "white collar men." Especially noteworthy is his effort on behalf of unemployed musicians. To aid them he is undertaking to obtain a CWA grant for the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

If subsidized by the government, the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra could be used, it is suggested, to promote education by giving concerts for school children. There are alluring possibilities in the scheme, and it is gratifying to learn that the CWA authorities at Washington are giving it sympathetic consideration.

It is estimated that 10,000 persons in the Pitts- burgh district are now working on CWA jobs, and the number may be doubled or trebled during the next month. But private employers should not feel that their responsibility has been accordingly lessened. If they drop men from their payrolls now, to let the government care for them, much of the benefit of the CWA program will be lost.

Not the least of mankind's achievements during 1933 have been in the field of science. The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, describes some of the more interesting in tomorrow's issue. Did you know, for example, that a way has been found of taking photographs in pitch-dark rooms by using the invisible infra-red rays?

There is an article in tomorrow's American Weekly about sleep-walking. Sleep-walking also figures in one of O. Soglow's fantastic comics, "The Ambassador," which will be found in Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Soglow's pictures are in a class by themselves. But their uniqueness is not their only charm.

Once upon a time Americans were very good horse traders.

Their ability in this line of bargaining was so notable that it found its place in literature. David Harum became the archetype of Yankee shrewdness.

Sad to say, however, in this motorized age our "horse sense" appears to have departed from us. And so we have reopened our rich wine market to defaulter France on France's kind-hearted offer to buy a few apples from us.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The editor of the Cincinnati Post, where my journalistic pin feathers sprouted, has invited me to come out and sit in the managing editor's chair for a few days. The bid followed my blurt in a reminiscent letter to him that this job was once a fixed ambition.

His graciousness was flattering and is consigned to my ditty box of appreciations. Yet it came too late. The parade has passed. Instead of swinging the shiny baton in drum major's hat, I'm the fellow bringing up the rear, with chalked face, and baggy pantaloons, waving at the kiddies and balancing a feather on my nose.

Memory of managing editors is clearly etched. They hurricaned into the picture at 7 a. m. with a glower, scared the daylights out of a cub or so and began to speed things up to break-neck tautness. It was buckitty-buckitty until they slipped over to Foucar's for a tall one at 4 p. m.

There isn't a managing editor worthy of the name who would change places with a king. In large cities they are often squeezed out in middle years and tossed aside like orange peels. But no class of executives have drunk so deeply of life's enormous excitements.

* * *

My efforts to be a managing editor were a rainbow chase tinged with personal tragedy. Time after time I clutched at the fabled pot of gold—and missed! Always they sent another boy. On at least six different occasions it seemed certain I was the guy. But when I twittered in with a carefully rehearsed acceptance manner a whirlwind from outside was occupying the throne.

* * *

But hope is perpetual in the 20's and I'd get up, hot and unbuttoned, brush myself off and with anticipatory gleam be ready for the next crack-up. Once slyly I even had cards printed proclaiming the title. No one, save my wife, considered me eligible, I now realize, but in my futile enthusiasm, I did not see how it could be otherwise. Even today, when such an elevation is a bit empty, I am inclined to think they were overlooking a bet. Such is the obstinacy of an utterly foolish fixation.

* * *

Thus the tug is almost irresistible to return for a few days' joust with that job I could never land. What fun to swing off an Elm street car, take the stairs four steps at a time, hurl my coat to Clinton, the coat room boy, and zoom to the managing editor's slot in the copy desk! I'd enjoy sensing that sudden momentary calm in every editorial shop when His Nibs, the M. E., walks through and becomes a hub in the cycle of imagination spinning around a copy desk.

* * *

There'd be a stop for a moment in the telegraph room to exchange acid insults with Chief Operator Scholl. He had seen scores of managing editors come and go. Scholl's acerbities were only half mumbled through the electric sputter of dots and dashes, his sentences so stinging the ends took care of themselves. He had the contempt of permanency for constant change. A peek into the dark of the photographic room for a whiff of those vinegarish smells, too.

* * *

I'd like to stand at the water cooler, twirling a sheet of copy paper into a drinking horn, in that delightfully relaxing let-up as newsies with muezzin shouts race in all directions with an extra. Soon we would know "if we beat the opposition." Also pop in to see Bushnell, his face in perpetual pucker, scratching out tomorrow's cartoon. Maybe "Bush" and I would have time to send off a green copy boy to Eddie Craig in the composing room for "a bucket of editorial." And indulge heartless laughter as he toiled back in a back-breaking agony with a load of linotype slugs.

* * *

We wonder if Gerdes' is still there. At noon there was a cut through an alley to Papa Gerdes' highly mirrored cafe. A bald, roly-poly Teuton, he exploded his welcomes like a bottle of pop, but was our friend when funds were low—which was precisely every Monday.

* * *

It would be grand to dash off one more 8-column streamer in 48 pt. Cheltenham Bold with a three deck drop—"Drug Crazed Slayer Trapped in Burning House!" I'd like to hear the flutey soprano uptake of Sue, the telephone girl's "All rightie." . . . The clump of the outraged subscriber . . . The puckish old-timer who didn't know what all of us knew: This was his last week . . . Ah, the newspaper game. What made it fascinate us so!

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

Release

I will let down these bars that shut me in
Away from things most dear and most desired.
I will break chains of subterfuge and sin
That close the paths whereto I have aspired.
Too long, too long fear's massive walls have cast
Upon my life their shadow and their threat;
I will seek sunlit, wind-swept fields at last,
Denying dreary phantoms of regret!

The power is mine to leave my prison cell,
To wander, free as any heaven-sweet wind.
And so I will throw off the evil spell
And leave the dim enchantments all behind.
Release is gained since I have found it true
That I was prisoner and jailer, too!

LISTEN, WORLD!

The Story of a Mother

Mary Borden has written a beautiful book. It is about Mary of Nazareth, the mother of Jesus Christ.

It is not a religious book. It is not even written as a book about a great saint. It is simply the story of a brave, devoted and terribly troubled mother—who was loyal in spite of everything. And there can be in all human drama no greater, deeper theme than that.

A true story about a mother—the strangest and most difficult of all stories to write!

For, as every mother knows, mothers are not at all what they are supposed to be. And mother love, with its cruel confusions, its dragging inertias, its bitter penalties, is anything but the ecstasy which the poets would have us imagine.

Mary of Nazareth was to know and suffer all these things, even though in later years she was to be called the Mother of God.

First of all she was to discover that her boy was a stranger to her—a stranger whom she could never hope to understand.

Never yet was there a mother who was not forced to make this discovery, or whose heart did not chill when she made it. And always it comes as a devastating shock, against which she battles with all the force of her nature.

For this is incredible—contrary to all the beautiful things one has heard about motherhood. Does not everyone know that a mother and child are, in some miraculous way, indissolubly one—bound together in spirit as well as flesh? How could it be otherwise? How can this little creature whom she has created within her own body, fed with her own blood, filled with her own spirit, ever stand apart from her, even in his most secret thought?

And so every mother sets herself against the truth. Sometimes she fights it all her days, and spoils her own life and her child's in the cruel combat. But nearly always she braces herself to accept this hurt, as she has braced herself to accept all the other pain and terror of motherhood, and goes on with her service, knowing that with each step forward her child leaves her further behind.

"All our striving somehow fails
"To lift that which lies between."

No human being realizes the torturing truth of that mystery, or pays as much for the knowledge, as a mother. And there is a bitterness in it that, at times, conquers the noblest heart. For the child, in his strangeness, may find new worlds for himself; but for the mother there can be no greater adventures. She has given everything for love. Now she must carry its inevitable cross of loneliness as best she may.

So Mary, the dreaming girl, became Mary, the mother. Not an all wise saint, comforted and fortified by divine confidence and superhuman revelations, but only a simple, bewildered, utterly loving woman who was determined to live for her boy, though she could never hope to understand him or be comforted by his understanding.

He was to die a terrible death—this passionate, mysterious alien to whom she had given birth. But before He died, He was to live an even more terrible life—a life that defied the most cherished traditions of the orthodox Jew—that denied the teachings of His own father and mother—that brought down upon them awful persecution and humiliation, and even more terrifying adulation.

All of Mary's gentleness shrunk from such a life. All her piety recoiled against it. And yet—she followed him. She was His mother. He was her boy. Then, for her—for any real mother—there could be but one rule. She would stay at His side. Though He ascended into heaven, or descended into hell, and though either process was a nightmare mystery to her poor, confused spirit, yet she would share His lot.

"ENTREAT ME NOT TO LEAVE THEE, OR TO RETURN FROM FOLLOWING AFTER THEE: FOR WHITHER THOU GOEST I WILL GO AND WHERE THOU LODGEST I WILL LODGE: THY PEOPLE SHALL BE MY PEOPLE, AND THY GOD, MY GOD. WHERE THOU DIEST I WILL DIE, AND THERE WILL I BE BURIED.

Dim ages since, another Jewess had said those words, and they had become, forevermore, the creed of all selfless devotion. Weary, bewildered, heartbroken, Mary lived that creed—from the travail in the straw filled manger, in the drudgery of a poor man's home, through the mounting horror of those three incredible years—to the foot of the blood stained cross—Mary followed her boy, sharing His life, feeling, in her own heart, the agony of His death.

Then, for her, it was all over.

Just the story of a mother—the truth about motherhood. Only another mother can know the comfort it will bring.

Recovery Program Slowed By 'Oxcart' Government

By James T. Williams, Jr.

IN state after state, an obsolete system of county and local government continues to obstruct the efforts of the Roosevelt administration to distribute relief and provide work for the most destitute and deserving in the army of the unemployed.

This evil inheritance, which President Roosevelt has repeatedly condemned as a hand-me-down from the days when the oxcart was a widely used means of transportation, offers a challenge and an opportunity to every citizen who believes that "government is protection." This is the shortest definition of government ever given. It is one of the best.

When government anywhere ceases to protect the weak against the strong, the law abiding against the lawless, the generous against the greedy, the honest against the dishonest, the merciful against the ruthless, it is no longer government but only a "racket."

In many states, the greedy, dishonest, ruthless and organized power of the spoilsmen of politics has supplanted popular government with the tyrannical rule of political racketeers. Against this indefensible injustice the tides of public resentment are rising. In the coming year their force is going to be felt in both political parties from the bottom of the governmental structure to the top.

* * *

95 Counties In Tennessee

TENNESSEE is one of the states where the oxcart system of government is clogging the machinery of relief re-employment, which the Roosevelt administration is striving to operate fairly and effectively.

Tennessee's 95 county governments maintain on the public payroll a horde of officeholders who continue to draw salaries while thousands of people throughout the state are destitute. And when the federal government undertakes to distribute relief and provide winter work for those of the unemployed thousands who most need it, county and local politicians add to the difficulty of distributing federal aid fairly.

It is not surprising that there was an uprising at Dayton, Tenn., the other day, where the unemployed protested against local politicians playing politics with federal relief. The real surprise, among those who know conditions in that and other states where oxcart government prevails, is the patience of the people under the burdens that political racketeering has imposed upon them.

In Kentucky, the Roosevelt administration finally found it impossible to depend upon any state agency either for the distribution of relief or for providing winter work for the unemployed. Government in that state dodged its responsibilities and supinely surrendered to the greed of county and local politicians who there, as elsewhere, are a favorite fetch and carry for the forces of special privilege.

* * *

Federal Aid Abused In Kentucky

FOR these reasons, the entire care of Kentucky's thousands of destitute unemployed has for some time devolved upon the federal government. Federal funds and federal personnel are financing and distributing federal relief in Abraham Lincoln's native state.

In Mississippi complaints are increasing against the abuse of Federal aid by two factions within the Democratic party. Unless this is quickly checked, the Roosevelt administration will have to send into that state federal personnel from the outside to save the hungry from starvation. There are many other states and metropolitan communities where conditions as bad exist because government is dominated by county and local politicians who keep their favorites on the pay and relief rolls while the destitute unemployed go hungry and the taxpayers go broke.

When Congress reconvenes and the President, in pursuance of his constitutional duty, makes his annual report upon "the state of the Union," millions of Americans are hoping to hear from him how they can rid themselves of the oxcart system of county and local government and build anew upon a firm foundation a government within the several states that represents the people, instead of a greedy horde of political parasites.

Isn't It So?

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

CATTLE rustling on a wide scale in Colorado, and a suit in Texas over the gun which spelled death for Billy the Kid, are two bits of news which throw back to the wild and woolly West. Our present-day rustler has gone modern. His mode of operation is to drive stolen cattle to the nearest highway and load them on speedy trucks. The odd lawsuit in Texas traces back to the pioneer days, and the cattle wars in New Mexico in the late seventies and early eighties.

It was on a balmy summer evening in 1880 when Billy the Kid, a visitor at a ranch of Pete Maxwell, was on his way to the ranchhouse to cut himself a steak from a freshly-killed steer. Sheriff Pat Garret had chosen the same hour to ride out to Maxwell's ranch, seeking the elusive Billy. The sheriff saw him first, beat him to the draw and in the quickness of a flash of a six shooter the life was snuffed out of the young man who was credited with as many killings as he had birthdays.

Billy, the last of the frontier feudists, was born William H. Bauney and one of the many stories has it that he came from New York's East Side. There's no doubt that he was a pretty bad two-gun man and given to the boast that he had killed 21 men before reaching his majority.

Billy was one of three things: "The most cruel and desperate outlaw in the annals of the Southwest." (So he is described by the historians of the wild and woolly.) "He was a good kid, but he got in bad company." (That is the testimony of a frontier woman.) "I don't believe he killed any more than six men and these in the feuds of the time." (This third and last opinion came recently from a survivor of the old West, a man who knew Billy well and who happened to be a neutral in the cattle wars.)

This witness, Charles Foor, told also of being present at the truce between Billy and the gunbearer of the rival, one Evans. They were unarmed, but behind barricades on either side of the muddy street of the cow town were the two bands of desperadoes waiting for the first sign of treachery. However, there was none, and the only victim was a neutral who was shot down at Charley Foor's side because he was ungracious in his refusal to have a drink in celebration of the peace pact.

As already said, Billy lived by the gun and died by the gun. And now the Court of Appeals of the Sovereign State of Texas rules that this particular gun is the property of Mrs. Pauline Garret, widow of Sheriff Pat. The estate of one Tom Powers had claimed ownership of this celebrated antique, contending that it had been given to Powers in payment of a loan. The gun returns to the Garret trophy room.

The weeds grow over the grave of Billy in the cemetery at Fort Sumner, New Mexico. And his name and his misdeeds fade into legend.

Albino Strain in San Blas Indians

TWO Navy planes from the Panama Canal Base went winging with doctors, medical supplies and a laboratory to the San Blas country, made up of many small islands off the north coast of Panama.

A brave and sturdy people, with amazingly forthright ideas on morals and manners, the San Blas came in for general attention a few years back when an explorer persuaded three blonde tribesmen to return with him to this country. Here they were hailed as "white Indians," but science catalogued them as nothing more extraordinary than the offspring of an hereditary Albino strain.

Most of the 30,000 San Blas are copper-colored. They live in bamboo huts, under their chiefs and medicine men. Farming and fishing give them the necessaries of life. They are one-woman men and divorce is prohibited. They permit no mingling with the whites, and San Blas women who departed from the paths of rectitude and from the country have been followed and slain. Where Montezuma and the mighty Aztecs failed, these Indians have succeeded over the sweep of four centuries.

Haiti Now Called 'Hispaniola'

INTERESTING news from the warm Caribbean that the Island of Haiti will hereafter be known under its old Spanish name, the name Columbus gave it, "Hispaniola." As the Literary Digest so charmingly puts it, "Hispaniola is a name which tolls like a silver ship's bell in some great galleon, or booms like the surf on a palm-fringed beach." It is instinct with all the flash and color of the Spanish Indies in the days when the plate ships came home from Vera Cruz or Nombre de Dios; clothed with the romance of the days when the treasure-laden pack mules jingled over the old paved trail from Panama, when the English pirates and Spanish pro-consuls fought for empire under the sparkling sunlight of the Spanish Main.

All this makes one think of soldiers of fortune, of whom there is in New York a lively and authentic example. Young Winston Ehrgott is there to work for the recognition of the present government of Cuba. A lively, husky, good-looking chap who had a hand in ditching Machado. They fired him from West Point seven years ago because, when it came to mathematics, his cosines got all mixed up with his logarithms.

He was with Commander Byrd on the North Pole flight and then made another try at West Point. Some pranksome business or other got him the gate once more and next he turned up, like one of Richard Harding Davis' heroes, as a captain of cavalry with Venezuelan revolutionists.
